A REAL FARM

If you desire to purchase 46 acres of the very best of sandy loam, 25 acres in cultivation, 18 in stump pasture, the remainder in timber, see the John H. Scott Realty Co. at once. It will raise the very best of crops without irrigation during dry seasons like the one just past. You can see 8 acres of corn on this land that will go 80 bushels to the acre or better. You can raise from 200 to 500 bushels of potatoes per acre. It now has several acres of the very best of kale, stock beets, and carrots. There is no better land for strawberries, loganberries raspberries, filberts, walnuts, or any kind of fruit. It has one acre in full bearing family orchard, good six room house, good barn, and running water. It is sub-irrigated and will insure a heavy crop every year. The price of $200 per acre may seem high, but will not seem so when you see what the land produces. $3500 cash, remainder on long time at 6 per cent. This land will pay you wages and pay the incumbrance in two years if you handle it right. Will put in for the above price a good team, harness and wagon, good cow, full blood brood sow, 75 bushels of potatoes, 5 tons of hay, all tools and machinery, and enough corn to fill a 40-ton silo. See us at once, if you are interested.

How would you like to be the milk man?" asks Mr. N. C. Maris in the Angora and Milk Goat Journal. This is not a joke, but a serious question which is being put to thousands of boys and girls in the schools of Portland and other cities of Oregon just now, and, judging by the response and general interest, it looks as if Portland and perhaps some of the other larger cities will soon be dotted with scores of small dairies. Instead of being occupied by cows, these miniature dairies will be filled with what you might call "vest pocket editions" or imitations of that noble animal, all doing their utmost to assist her in meeting the great shortage of milk so essential to the welfare, not only of infants, children and inalids, but of most adults as well. Goats are intelligent, sensitive and affectionate and make ideal pets for children. They are responsive to kind treatment and, like the dairy cow, will give much better returns at the pail if so treated. It is a splendid thing from a habit and character developing standpoint for a child to associate with, and have the care of such an animal. As they care for and learn to love their goats we hope they will remember the thousands of destitute children in war-ridden, devastated France and Belgium, who formerly depended upon the gentle little goat for their principal nourishment and living, and will be willing and glad to donate a part of the profits from their little goat dairy business to assist in restocking that country with milk goats. Mr. Maris, who writes the above, is the Field Organizer of Boys' and Girls' Club Work, Oregon State Department of Education. He is promoting the milk goat project in the United States and we hope many of the readers of Our Dumb Animals will join this promising movement.—Our Dumb Animals.
