THIS IS A SERMONETTE

Nothing in this world justifies itself excepting through service.

If a person or a thing serves no useful purpose, the earth is merely cumbered.

The highest reason for existence is service; the only good reason.

By this sign, the want ads. of The Statesman are worth while; they furnish a common medium of exchange and information for a great public, with many wants and needs.

They cost little; they do much—and they have gone on this way for over 65 years; and they will serve a much larger public in the next 168.

The answers fairly rolled in last week.

The writer thinks all the misspelled words were found—not by any one person, but by all who tried.

One lady who did very well wrote that she was 79 years old; she should have said 70 years young; for youth is not always a matter of years.

This contest draws to a close. 15th week; 5 yet to run.
