DISGUSTING MILLING AROUND IN A CIRCLE

The whole world's reorganization is held up by the United States Senate, as that body disgustingly mills around in a circle and gets nowhere, while waiting for a few self-seeking hot air artists and peanut politicians to get through making meaningless speeches, that serve no good purpose whatever, but do great harm because of the delay they permit.

There are thirty-six nations represented in the industrial conference now assembled at Washington. It was an American idea in the first place and was arranged as a part of the treaty-making at Versailles. Because it was an American proposition the convention was located in the capital of this country. Nearly all the countries of Europe and South America have their delegations present.

Even Germany and Austria are at the door, but America cannot be officially represented, because the Senate has not ratified the treaty.

Americans may be present by courtesy, but they would have neither voice nor vote. Hiram Johnson and his bunch, each behaving like the wild man of Borneo because of the voting strength of the British empire in the League of Nations, are trying to keep America from having any vote at all right here at home in this annex to the league.

And the whole Democratic administration at Washington shows little excepting inefficiency.

Supplies are piling up at the ports because there is no adequate provision made for foreign credits—while half of Europe goes hungry. Time drags along all too slowly.

It is a long time till November, 1920, when some red corpse will be injected into the political bodies that are festering and fusing and stinking with idleness and slothfulness at Washington.

THE NEW AND BETTER ORDER

The sale by Great Britain to the United States of the R-38, the biggest airship yet built, has a profound significance.

It is a pledge of faith that war between the two nations is an impossibility.

For the wars of the future, if there are to be wars, will be fought in the air.

In 1914 when the Germans invaded Belgium, their great superiority, owing to the efforts of Count Zeppelin, in the building of airships, particularly of the rigid type, was universally recognized.

No other power had progressed along the same line.

The technical difficulties involved in catching up with Germany are indicated by the fact that it was not until the close of the war, over four years later, that the British, in spite of incessant endeavor and large expenditure, had even approached the point at which they could build airships in any way to compare with the Zeppelins. The transatlantic voyage of the British R-34 was not accomplished until the fifth anniversary of the outbreak of the war was near.

Soon after the entry of the United States in the war, in April, 1917, steps were taken toward the eventual development in this country of airships of the rigid type. But it was recognized by even the most optimistic experts that several years would be required, as in the case of Great Britain, before the problem could be worked out. It has not been worked out yet.

In the days before the war the two strongest military powers, Germany and Great Britain, guarded with jealous secrecy their designs for airships, warships, and all articles of military equipment. In each country a furor was aroused from time to time over the efforts of spies to discover military secrets. Contrast with this the spectacle of the British government not only selling its largest and best airship to the United States but also offering to our navy department to train a crew for us so that we may have the fullest knowledge of the operation of the giant craft! Coupled with the recent decision to reduce the personnel of the British navy to half of what it was before the war, this episode affords concrete basis for the hope of new world relations in which the spirit of the League of Nations shall be effective.

They are still spelling it Si(gh)beria.

Have you a little profiteer in your home?

If you are bound to get nutty on something, get nutty on filberts.

At this writing both Lenin and Buflon appear to be hanging on.—Exchange.

You will be surprised at the showing of the filbert industry, in the slogan pages of The Statesman of Thursday. It is one of the biggest things of all, in its possibilities.

tirely too slow for the present age and generation.

The Democrats down in Texas are getting ready for the next national campaign. They have split up into three factions. With which one is Joe Bailey allied?

With the many crises in various lines in this country there are a lot of folks who are not particularly interested in what the Bolsheviks are doing—in Russia.

Five people killed and 131 injured in automobile accidents in Portland in October. The great wonder is that there were not 10,000 such accidents.

THEN AND NOW.

When Lincoln was a youth he sold whisky over the counter of a country store for 10 cents a quart, but he was thoughtful enough not to drink the stuff himself. He couldn't afford it. Now there are a lot of people who would be glad to pay $5 a quart for it, and think they can afford it. But they can't get it, although the government has 70,000,000 gallons of it stored in Kentucky.

ARABIAN HORSES AGAIN.

Thoroughbred Arabians will be exhibited at the National Horse show in Madison Square Garden, November 17 to 21, for the first time since 1895, when the late Homer Davenport showed the Arabs he brought from the desert, and which he exhibited at the 1905 fair in Portland.

The proceeds of this season's horse show are to go to the Salvation Army. Full-blooded Arabs are almost unknown in New York, though a number of the devotees of Central Park bridge paths ride three-quarter and half-breeds.

W. R. Brown will enter the Arab mare Gaemura, considered almost a duplicate of the famous gray charger ridden by Napoleon, and which has been immortalized in the painting, "The Retreat from Moscow." Mr. Brown is the leading Arab breeder in America, having recently purchased for $100,000 the Colonel Spencer Borden stud. Among the polo mounts exhibited will be a small Arab stallion that has won three first prizes in the Crystal Palace show in England.

THE DOUBTERS.

The American College of Surgeons does not think much of Dr. Serge Voronoff's experiments in transferring the interstitial gland of a lusty young orang-outang to a decrepit millionaire and making him over again.

It sounds like one of those Ponce de Leon stories made over for latter-day consumption.

Some of the doctors admit that they wouldn't know how to go after the interstitial gland if they sought for it with a scalpel, tweezers, a cork-screw or a jimmy. They do not know that the best tool to use in taking away anything from a baboon is a monkey wrench. They do not even know how to locate the aforesaid gland without the aid of a range-finder. They do not know anything about this Franco-Russian scientist and they are suspicious of the whole business.

The Voronoff experiments bore all the elements of realism.

They were described with details and some of the subjects were apparently identified.

Yet the American doctors are inclined to list the story as being among those too good to be true. The wish is merely father of the thought. Before the days of Galen and Aesculapius savants were searching for the elixir of life—that mysterious something that would pluck an ancient from the shadow of the tomb and renew in him the fire and passions of youth.

'Tis an interesting thing to speculate upon, but a miracle to achieve. Therefore, Dr. Voronoff will have to show the American surgeons.

He will have to furnish something more than this press-agent stuff about grafting a chimpanzee on a man in his dotage and then having the patient run up trees and spring from limb to limb on his way from the hospital. Any stories of women who have to shoot their aged husbands to bring them down from the boudoir windows of other chambers will be received under a cloud of suspicion on the part of the home-brewed doctors.

Until such time as successful experiments are made and classified in this country the American surgeons will withhold their tributes to the foreigner.

THE GREATER EVIL.

A number of noble-hearted church women of Los Angeles are raising a fund for the purpose of caring for a baby soon to be born at the leprosy bungalow of the county hospital down there.

The afflicted mother-to-be already has two little daughters who, apparently, are in perfect health and who, for that very reason, will probably never again be allowed to embrace the woman who bore them. The husband, it is said, cannot obtain steady employment because he is always discharged when his employer discovers that there is leprosy in the family. He visits his stricken wife once a week, being allowed to speak to her from a distance.

In all the world there is, perhaps, no more pathetic thing than this—unless it is for a mother to see her son, whom she has raised in purity, suddenly become tainted with that which leads to moral death.

THE DAY.

"It was a magnificent day in the senate for Great Britain," the Hearst papers report Senator Johnson as saying after three amendments to the league of nations had been voted down yesterday, including Johnson's own.

We don't see where Great Britain came in—but it was a damn poor day for Hearst and Hiram.—Los Angeles Times.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

A mighty good omen.

Farms are being bought up in Polk county.

And they will be taken over by thrifty farmer folk who will raise supplies for the factories and markets, and who and whose children will help do the work that must be done to continue and this section on the high road of prosperity they are now traveling.

A man who travels around a lot says Salem is the most prosperous city on the Pacific coast for its size, and growing more solidly than any other.

The firm hand of the United States government is bringing matters in the coal strike around to the point of arbitration. All three sides, the employers, the employees and the public are learning something.

The farmers in this valley should realize what they can raise the best—the best adapted to our soil and climate. The slogan pages are marking them out, week by week; and filberts, with which the Statesman of Thursday will be full—even nutty—is one of the profitable crops, as will be plainly shown.

THE PREACHER.

(By Alfred P. Bates) Strange, we never praise the preacher 'Til his pastorate is flown; Strange that we should slight his preaching 'Til his time has come and gone; Strange that sermons strong and helpful Never seem one-half so fair As when Conference is over And has sent him off elsewhere.

If we knew the preacher's sermons That have caused us homesick pain Would be far away tomorrow— Never trouble us again— Would the keen eye of our pastor Catch the frown upon our brow: Would the press of Bible precepts Vex us then as they do now?

Ah, those red-hot gospel sermons How they point of memories back To the busy words and actions Strewn along our backward track. How those sermons all remind us, In years after they're passed by, To appreciate our Pastor While our Pastor still is nigh.

Let us gather up the sermons Lying now about our path, Let us love and keep the sayings That have stirred up all our wrath Let us find our sweetest comfort In our pastor of today, With a patient heart to listen To whatever he may say.

Nervous Run-Down Woman

Tells How Vinol Creates Strength Dukes, Tenn.—"I live on a farm and keep house for six in my family. I got into a nervous run-down condition so it seemed as though I would die. A friend advised me to try Vinol. I have been greatly improved by its use and am better and stronger in every way."—Mrs. H. H. Goodwin.

The reason Vinol was so successful in Mrs. Goodwin's case is because it contains beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptones and glycerophosphates, the very elements needed to build up a weak, run-down system and create strength. Emil A. Schaefer, and druggists everywhere.
