Washington, D. C .- Control with view to the evenutal eradication of bovine tuberculosis is being accomplished by a co-operative movement now being carried on by the Bureau of Animal Industry, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and state livestock commissions or state veterinarians. This movement was inaugurated in 1917 and Herd List No. 3 of the Bureau of Animal Industry, which is revised to April 1, 1919, has recently come from the public printer. This list shows the number of accredited herds-those that have successfully packed two annual or three semi-annual tests without a reactor or a suspect—to be 782. Virginia heads the list with 196 herds, while Minnesota stands second with 131. Oregon has 19 herds and Washington 7, and the following is a list of accredited herds in these two states: Ayshire—E. In addition to the foregoing, 115 herds in Oregon and Washington had successfully passed one test prior to April 1, 1919. Many of these have undoubtedly since passed additional tests and have become eligible to the Accredited Herd List, but their trans-Accredited Herd List, but their trans-fer has not yet been announced by the bureau. The next circular containing the Accredited Herd List will be issued about January 1, and it will be interesting to note the increase in tested herds in the various states. The Pacific Northwest is making a most creditable record in the present campaign, breeders generally being ready and willing to co-operate with federal and state officials in their efforts to stamp out bovine tubercu-losis. During themonth of September, 7105 cattle in 671 herds in Oregon and Washington were tested and only 138 reactors found. The cam-paign in these states is being carried on under the direction of Dr. Sam B. Foster, of Portland. Dr. Foster has charge of the Portland office of the bureau of animal industry and has two veterinary assistants in Oregon and three in Washington. Dr. W. H. Lytle and Dr. E. F. Benson, state veterinarians of Oregon and Washington respectively, are co-operating tive Oct. 1st, 1918. Southbound.
