Harvesting and Curing.

The Oregon walnut as it falls from the tree has no superior, but the same nut as it is often offered to the consumer is often inferior even to Manchurian nuts. This is because of careless or ignorant methods of handling the harvest. We cannot expect to equal the California prices for nuts if we persist in dumping dirty, stained, unsorted and often mouldy nuts on the markets.

The walnut usually starts falling from the trees in early October. The orchard should be gone

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night, just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c.

over every five or six days and the nuts picked up. They should not remain in the sacks over a couple of days or mildew is liable to start. A light shaking of the limbs with poles, with hooks on their ends, will jar off many of the nuts, but the shaking should not be severe enough to shake off nuts the husks of which have not split. A good rain in harvest season will hasten the splitting of the husks.

After being brought in from the orchard the nuts should be washed at once. If washing cannot be done within a couple of days, the nuts had better be left on the ground than in the sacks. The best and cheapest washing can be done by a power washer, but such a machine is rather expensive for the small grower. Perhaps the best rig for the small grower is a trough inside of which is fitted another trough with slat bottom, the slats being close enough together to prevent the nuts falling through, but far enough apart to allow dirt and pieces of husk to fall through. Water and friction are necessary for cleaning. A good stable broom will answer for the washing. A half a sack at a time can be handled in one of these washers. After the nuts are clean the false bottom trough is lifted up and the nuts are spread on trays.

A prime dryer makes an excellent walnut dryer. Nuts should be dried at a temperature of from 70 to 95 degrees. Lower temperatures are liable to favor mildewing of the kernels, and higher ones may crack the nuts or else bring out the oil in the nuts. A walnut is dry when the thin filament that divided the two halves of the kernel is brittle. It is not dry enough as long as this is elastic.

California walnuts are graded to size by passing them over a grader. The light nuts are also taken out and the lighted ones and those having disfigured shells are sent to the cracking plant where the kernels are removed and sold to con-fectioners. Oregon nuts at present are not graded. They come to the market in all kinds of shapes, some well cleaned and dried and others stained, and often mouldy. They come all sizes mixed together. And where an attempt has been made to grade them the grower has used his own standard of grades, so that we have no such thing as a No. 1 Oregon walnut or a No. 2, as has California. The grower buying California No. 1 nuts knows that every nut in the bag will come up to certain standards in respect to shape, size and cracking percentage. California nuts are sold to our jobbers in Portland in June before they are half grown. Oregon nuts cannot be sold before October, when the grower can present samples, and by that time the jobbers are out of the market. We have up to this time been unable to sell our stuff to the local grocers at from $50 to $100 per ton less than they pay for California stuff. Even if we are willing to sell at this discount we will not be able to longer, owing to the fact that the local production now is greater than the local consumption.

We must have a nut selling organization which will grade and sell the Oregon crop. Such an organization would determine a standard of grades and would grade all the nuts sold through it to this one standard. It would be able to guarantee its pack to the jobbers, a thing an individual cannot do, and could enter the market in June in competition with the California people. The Oregon tonnage would double each year for several years to come, and provision for the handling of these crops should be made now.

The Oregon walnut as it falls from the tree has no superior, and few, if any, equals. Proper methods of curing, grading and marketing will put this product in the high place that it merits in the markets of the world.

Those interested in nut growing should join the Western Walnut association. This is an educational organization of men and women interested in nut culture in all its forms, and its membership is open to the public. An annual meeting is held in which two days are devoted to papers and discussions of nut subjects by experts. A summer tour is made of various orchards so that members may learn methods of operation of leading growers. The association issues an annual report containing the papers and discussions thereon presented at the meetings. Membership and a copy of the report costs $1 per year. quette and Mayette, grafted on California black walnut, and have 100 more bought to set out next spring. I am proud of my little walnut orchard, and honestly think they are the lazy man's crop—hence I am in it. —Dr. C. W. Beecher. Salem, Nov. 10, 1919.

Trees 45 Years Old.

R. M. Diem, near Quincy, six miles north of Salem, has on his place 40 walnut trees bearing, some of them 45 years old. Some 25 of them were grown from walnuts that came from the old home of his father in Austria, who sent for them after coming to America. Some of the trees have borne nuts for over 30 years.

Mr. Diem got seven bushels from one tree this year; some bore a bushel. The old trees are around the barnyard and house; they take up perhaps an acre.

He has received 40 cents a pound for some nuts; on mail orders, and 37 cents for some, and 25 cents for others. He had 2400 pounds this year.

Mr. Diem has some black seedlings two years old that he has grafted to Franquettes and Mayettes.

He has become convinced that there is great profit in walnuts grown in the right way on a commercial scale.

Mr. Lee Is Interested.

A. E. Lee of Silvertown writes under date of Nov. 10:

"Yours of the 7th at hand, and will say thanks for the compliment. I have 250 walnut trees, mostly seedlings planted last winter, the balance 5 years old and just in bearing."

"So cannot give any write-up of experience of value to your paper, but am very interested in getting what information possible from the observation of others."

for berries under contract and one-half cent per pound bonus to be paid voluntarily by the plaintiff. The plaintiff on or about that time further notified the defendants that it would not sue to the defendants, or any of them, the open market price for loganberries in the year 1919 at picking time, nor would it pay such price any year during the years such contracts called for delivery."

At that time the price of loganberries on the open market had advanced to 9 cents. The growers elected to rescind their contracts.

INDIAN BOYS ARE HEARD ON WAR SUBJECTS

First Armistice Day Program Is Made Important Event at Chemawa

TOWNER SEES MENACE

Superintendent Hall Praises Men Who Joined Colors in World War

CHEMAWA, Or., Nov. 12.—(Special to The Statesman.)—Armistice day at the Chemawa Indian school was fittingly observed. At 10 o'clock in the forenoon the entire faculty and student body assembled in the spacious auditorium to listen to a program in celebration of the signing of the armistice a year ago. Superintendent Hall had placed the affair in the hands of the returned overseas veterans of the school and Reginald Downie, the last boy to arrive home from participation in the war, was chairman—a position which he filled with credit to himself and the school.

The building was beautifully decorated with flags, pennants and flowers, and the stake was especially attractive. The band, under Director Loos, played a procession as all the various companies of students marched in and took their places. There was singing of patriotic airs and war songs, by the school and the girls' octette, and a special vocal solo by Russell Adams, a returned marine. The band also added its quota to the general interest and enjoyment. There were yells and "rahs" that were full of "pep" and "punch." It was certainly a demonstration of patriotism from real Americans.

Overseas Men Speak.

Russell Adams made a short talk on "Water Transportation of Men and the Ordnance of War," and it was interesting to hear him tell of the vast undertaking of assembling ships, men and war materials, and getting all in condition for the demands of war and transporting them across the Atlantic ocean to the scene of the great conflict.

Nick Orloff spoke on "The Perils and Hardships of Sea Navigation in Time of War—the Submarine, etc." and his talk was worthy the close attention that it received. Few people have the privilege of hearing first hand such accounts as the speaker gave of the tasks of transport duty and service in the late war, with the attendant danger of death on short notice. The speaker had lived through it all and knew his subject.

"Land Transportation of Vast Armies and Their Supplies in Provisions and Accoutrements" was the subject of John Beyers, who participated in every battle fought by the sons of Uncle Sam. It was a good talk and set forth many interesting features of the war.

Warms of Propaganda.

Elwood Towner, another veteran, gave "Personal Impressions of the War" as his talk. He emphasized the fact that the war was of industrial origin mainly and, such being the case, the struggle is still on and will likely continue for ages to come. He warned American people of the propaganda that has placed Russia in shackles today. He pointed to the strikes in this country as un-American, as carried on today, and intimated strongly that they were fed by the same fires that are keeping Russia ablaze today. In the course of his talk he made the statement that the United States was represented in the war by a greater percentage of Indians than any other race of people within her borders. It was a good talk.

Reginald Downie took as his subject "The Country as I Found it and as I Left it—The People, the Cities, the Architecture—Embracing Various Characteristics of Same—Aftermath of the Great Struggle of Democracy vs. Autocracy." This was a comprehensive series of subjects and was well handled. There were word pictures of it all, vividly and graphically given. The outstanding features of the talk was Mr. Downie's statement that not one German with whom he conversed would admit that Germany was whipped; that they were the victors of the war. He said that the German still has in the guise of a "civilian guard" a body of 1,000,000 soldiers, ready on a moment's notice to enter the ranks.

"The people of the United States must not allow themselves to be lulled to sleep," he declared, "for we are to enjoy liberty only on payment of eternal vigilance."

Superintendent Lands Students. On being called on for a few words Superintendent Hall responded briefly to the speaker of the large delegation of young men who had forsaken Chemawa in the time of the country's call and joined the colors. Many, he said, had returned to the fold, others mayhap would return, but some would never return—they were sleeping under the poppies on a foreign soil. All honor to them, both the living and the dead, he said as he called attention to Chemawa's large service flag unfurled in the room and spoke of the gold stars which adorned it as a center for so many black ones.

It was an occasion that gladdened the hearts of real patriots.

NONE NAMED IN INQUEST OVER BODY OF I. W. W.

come from the buildings in the vicinity of the I.W.W. hall, as first believed. It was learned today, when Herdige Fry, a 17-year-old boy, told the police that yesterday during the parade, he saw a man shooting toward town from a hill not far from the scene of the tragedy. The hill lies east of Tower avenue, Centralia's main street. Fry led the police to the spot today and they discovered a suit case containing a box of soft nosed cartridges, a field glass, a man's coat and a book containing I.W.W. songs.

Deportations to Begin.

Henry M. White, Seattle immigration commissioner, arrived here today to take steps to deport all the alien prisoners who are not held in connection with the shooting. No witnesses were examined at the inquest. The jury returned its verdict immediately after it examined the body. Justice of the Peace Charles P. House accepted the verdict without comment.

Identification Not Established.

Complete identification of the lynched man as "Brick" Smith was not established tonight. In some quarters it was thought possibly the man was not "Brick" Smith but some other Smith. There were several Smiths among the men arrested. Twenty-six alleged I.W.W. were in the city jail here and the Lewis county jail at Chehalis, near here, tonight awaiting hearings on charges the exact nature of which has not been determined. Nineteen were arrested following the shooting and five were taken in today. One woman, Mrs. A. McAllister, was among the prisoners.

Herman Allen, county prosecuting attorney, today appointed C. D. Cunningham, a local attorney, as special assistant prosecutor to assist in the cases against the arrested men. Allen said early today that he would file complaints or information against the men before tonight. Late today no charges had been filed, however.

Prisoners Mostly American. Of the 26 prisoners an examination tonight disclosed that 14 are American citizens, three are Swedes, one Bohemian and one Finn. The nationality of the others could not be learned.

Tonight the veterans' death list remained at four. The dead: Lieutenant Warren Grimm, Centralia attorney, commander of the local Grant Hodge Post of the American Legion and former University of Washington football star; Arthur McElfresh, Centralia pharmacist, veteran of the Argentine. Ben Casagrande, Greek bootblack, former member of the 91st division. Dale Hubbard, member of prominent northwest Washington family and former service man.

Watt's Condition Critical.

One of the wounded, John E. Watts, a young Chehalis veteran, was in a precarious condition tonight. The other wounded were reported recovering.

Quiet Prevails.

Brigadier General Harry J. Mow, adjutant general of Washington, arrived here tonight from Seattle. He came down at the request of Governor L. F. Hart to look over the situation. Tonight he reported to the governor that Centralia was quiet a dithal no disorder was expected. A description of Bert Brant, who it has been charged, fired the shot that killed Grimm, has been telegraphed police officers throughout the Pacific northwest.

Immigration Commissioner White, Promoting Attorney Allen, Frank P. Christensen, assistant state attorney, and United States department of justice agents conferred here today regarding the situation. No announcement of the results of the conference was made.

HAYWOOD SAYS OUTRAGE NOT WORK OF I.W.W.'S

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—William D. Haywood, general secretary of the Industrial Workers of the World, today said that there was no record of an I.W.W. branch at Centralia, Wash., where a fatal attack was made on Armistice day. He said he thought the acts of violence ascribed to the I.W.W. members were either committed by maniacs or were the result of provocation not yet disclosed.
