Mails Again Delivered to Silverton People

SILVERTON, Or., Dec. 16.—(Special to the Statesman)—The snow has caused much disturbance in the Silverton community. The rural mail carriers resumed their routes Monday after a lay off since Tuesday.
 The roads have been impassable but now trails have been broken made into Silverton. The moving picture houses were handicapped in not being able to get new films. The Salem-Silverton stage was off duty.
 The loggers had to stop operations at the camps. It took some time before they could be transported to Silverton because the logging trains were unable to run. However, all the loggers and the families at the camps have moved to town. The saw mills shut down Tuesday and do not expect to open until after the holidays. They will take this opportunity for their annual clean-up.

The snow reached a depth of 22 inches on the level and the thermometers registered as low as 15 degrees below zero.

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

The Story of a Honeymoon

A Wonderful Romance of Married Life Wonderfully Told by ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER CCCCLXIX

WHAT MADGE TOLD LILLIAN ABOUT HER DINNER GUARD PLANS.

When I realized that Lillian had telephoned to Dicky for aid in keeping possible tragedy, certainly inconvenience, in the shape of Mrs. Allis, away from the dinner her was giving in Robert Savarin's honor, a little thrill of gladness ran through me.

It does not matter how angry, justly or not, I may be at my husband, nor how sorely he may have disappointed me, if any emergency or danger comes, I long for his presence. It isn't so much a longing for protection—I have always been rather self-reliant—but a feeling that goes to the very roots of life itself, that in times of danger or sorrow we should be together sharing whatever might come. I wonder if this is merely a phase of my own temperament, or if other wives share this feeling?

I knew from Lillian's tone that Dicky would be strictly "on the job," my personal fear of Mrs. Allis changed to uneasiness for Dicky, although I knew that she had no almosty against him, that her vials of wrath were reserved for my head.

"Is Dicky Coming?"

As soon as I could do so after Lillian came back into the living room and Robert Savarin and Alfred Durkee joined us, I drew her aside where the others could not hear us.
 "Is Dicky coming tonight?" I asked.

"She looked at me keenly."
 "Of course he is," she answered.
 "Although he certainly was cross enough at both you and me this morning. The well known bear with a sore head had nothing on Dickybird. He sulked all the way to town.
 But he evidently repented this afternoon, for he sent me all these roses.
 Aren't they wonderful?"
