LEWIS ADVISES SPRING TRELLIS OF LOGAN VINES

Careful Study Leads to Belief That This Is Better for Vineyards

RECALLS FORMER FREEZE

Lower Portions of Vines Are Expected to Yield Fruit Next Season

The destruction of the loganberry vines on the trellis by the late freeze has caused a great many growers to ask the question: "Shall I place the vines on the wire in the fall hereafter or shall I let them remain on the ground until spring?"

The question goes right to the heart of the loganberry industry. The disaster that has been inflicted by the frigid weather is a serious loss, not only to the growers of the berries, but all business interests in the Willamette valley will directly or indirectly be affected.

Professor C. I. Lewis, who, for a number of years, made a special study of the now famous berry while he was at the head of the horticultural department of the Oregon Agricultural college, was asked to give the result of his observation and experience as to the best time to trellis the loganberry.

"I have always advocated letting the vines on the ground until spring," said Professor Lewis. "There is no special reason for putting them up on the wires in the fall unless it is to get this work out of the way so as to have more time for other farm operations in the spring."

"If the vines are bunched too much they may spread out so as to let the air reach all of the canes. As soon as the leaf growth starts in the spring they should be woven onto the trellis."

"This is the second time that the logans have been frozen back, and I would be in favor of taking no further chances on fall trellising if I could reasonably delay the work until spring."

Hopeless Diseases Can Not Be Cured by Doctors or Medicine

There are some diseases which are absolutely hopeless and past cure by any physician or medicine, but they may yet be palliated and a medicine if it can not help in one case it may help in another. To any one suffering from a disease a remission is a degree of health and a medicine that relieves or palliates a disease is of great benefit. We cannot guarantee to cure any disease with Number 40 For the Blood, but we quote word for word what the ingredients in 40 are recommended for in the U. S. Dispensary and New American Materia Medica. In the treatment of blood poison, an acknowledged specific among all schools of physicians, removes the causes of disease and stimulates the removal of waste, thus indirectly encouraging nutrition. Disorders of the nervous system demand this remedy, such as neuralgias, chronic rheumatism, gouty conditions, mal-nutrition, auto-intoxication, constipation. Used with phenomenal success in eczema and skin diseases, lumbago, glandular swellings, ulcerations of mucous membranes and in general disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys and spleen. Polk County Streams Rise Under Warm Rains

DALLAS, Or., Dec. 19.—(Special to The Statesman.)—The warm rains of the last two days have caused the snow in this section to disappear so rapidly that the streams in all parts of the county are reported to be rising rapidly and danger is felt to some of the bridges should the water get too high.

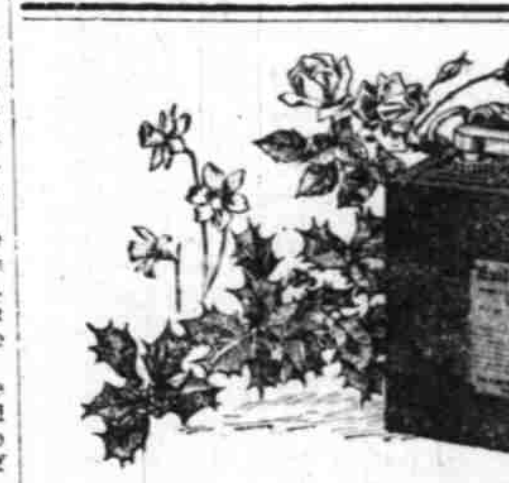

In Dallas the melting snow caused the water to back up on the sidewalks and large forces of men have been employed for two days clearing ditches along the sidewalks and shoveling the snow off the main streets so pedestrians will be able to move about.

The LaCreole river which runs through Dallas is higher than it has been for years, but unless a heavy downpour of rain should occur in the mountains west of here no danger is felt that the stream will get beyond its banks.

Reports from farmers living along the Luckiamute river say that stream is rising rapidly and the lowlands along the river are already under water.
