Senator Orton introduced a measare to amend section 3701, Lord's Oregon laws, as amended by section 5, chapter 408, laws of 1919, relating to the proceedings on foreclosure judgment and decree, and sale in the foreclosure of delinquent tax cer tificates. The measure removes the provision that "appleations for judgment and decree shall be filed with the clerk during the month of January only in any year and judgment and decree shall not be entered prior to the expiration of 60 days after the last day of each calendar month." Senator Thomas of Medford introduced a point resolution to refer to the people a proposed constitutional amendment to withdraw state aid from commercial fishing. The measure would prohibit any Tunds being paid out of the state treasury for the aid of commercial fishing except such funds as are received from taxes on equipment and output of the canneries. The legislature of 1919 made an appropriation for the commercial fishing industry.

Cross Meat Market Will Undergo Remodeling Soon

A permit was granted verter tay Sam Adolph, owner of the building at 370 State street where E. C. Cross & Sons are conducting a meat market to alter and repair the building.

The cost was estimated at $50.0. Two building permits were issued yesterday by City Recorder Race One to the C. K. ## REVELATIONS OF

The Story of a Honeymoon

A Wonderful Romance of Married Life Wonderfully Told by ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER XD1

WHY MADGE FEARS MILE ALLIS MAY NOT BE "BLUSS INC."

I caught my breath Po a gasp of bewildered terror when from my bed where she lay bound, Mrs. Allis spoke of the unpleasant consequences which would descend upon my father's head if Katherine Sonnot carried out her avowed intention of sending to Bellevue for drug treatment the woman who had tried to brow acid in my face, and had only been prevented from doing so by Katherine's presence of mind. I had thought the secret of Robert Gordon's identity, as my father, 215-216 Masonic Temple, Phones 1000 was known only to the little group of persons intimately connected with me, Dicky, Lillian and Harry Underwood, Jack Bickett and Katherine Sonnot. Grace Draper had learned of it, but she was down in South America with Harry Underwood. And Allen Drake-the mysterious man who had tried to get my father's address from me-was. I was sure, a government agent of some sort, and in no way could his affairs possibly be known to such a person as Mrs. Allis, The fact that this woman, who, was sure, was connected with enterprises that bordered upon crime. should know aught of my father held for me a menace other than the mere fear of serious trouble for him. It strengthened the secret terror concerning my father which I had long felt, the haunting fear that he, too. was an offender against the law. My unreasoning terror was such that I would have begged the woman to tell me what she had meant had not Katherine just in time caught my eye and warned me with finger on lips to be silent, and to leave the management of Mrs. Allis to her. "It's no use your signalling her," the mocking voice went on. "She

And I promise you that if you scream or attempt any mischief while we are out of this room, I will deal with you as I would any other insane person that I had to subdue. Please come outside, Madge. I want to talk to you undisturbed." 'I'll Have To Know The Truth." Her voice and manner were as undisturbed as if she had just uttered the most commonpiace of trivialities I did not understand the meaning of the vague threat she had uttered, but evidently Mrs. Allis did, for she made no protest. But her eyes, sullen, vindictive, followed us to the door. If looks could kill, Katherine and I would have been dead women before we reached it.

Outside in the hall, Katherine shut the door and faced me, her eyes troubled. "I'm sorry to quiz you, Madge, but I'll have to know the truth. Is it true, what she intimates, that she knows she could cause your father's and execution if she capture wished?" "I am utterly bewildered and ter-rified, Katherine," I returned. " don't know anything really about my father's affairs except that he writes me that he is in very great danger. really have no right to infer that his work is anything discreditable. but I am very much afraid it may be, because he is so secretive about it, and from the fact that a man !

could know that I am his daughter/

But, oh! Katherine, if she does know anything, let her go! I couldn't stand it to think that in order to save myself trouble I had endangered my father's life." What Does Mrs. Allis Know? Katherine took hold of my shoulder and shook me ever so slightly. "Try to have a little sense. Madge," she said, with a trace of ir-"If this woman really ritation. knows anything, what guarantee have you that she won't tell it as oon as it suits her purpose to do so whether we let her go or not? And I'm practically certain that she's bluffing, that she really knows nothing of any consequence. No, my dear, she's too dangerous to be turned loose, and I want your word of honor that you won't interfere by word or look with my management of her. Believe me, child, I've seen
