SPEECHES THAT OPEN COMMONS NOT HISTORIC

Lloyd George, Adamson and MacLean Speak for Various Groups

IRISH NOT REPRESENTED Emerald Island Discussed in Parts of All Opening Talks

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The speeches with which the new session of the house of commons was launched today do not make much history.

Premier Lloyd George, William Adamson and Sir Donald MacLean spoke for the government, laborites and liberals, respectively. No notable Irish voice was heard, although Ireland was the subject of part of all the speeches.

The premier gave a long explanation of the government's Russian policy, but refused to be drawn out by the other speakers on the topic of

USES OF ASPIRIN TOLD BY "BAYER"

Bayer Company, Who Introduced Aspirin 18 Years Ago, Give Advice.

When the Bayer company introduced Aspirin over 18 years ago, physicians soon proved it a marvelous help in relieving rheumatism, colds, headache, neuralgia, neuritis, aching joints and pain in general.

To get this same genuine, world-famous Aspirin, you must ask for "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," marked with the "Bayer Cross." You will find safe and proper directions in every unbroken package.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets cost only a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacid of Salicylicacid.

revising certain "unworkable" features of the peace treaty.

Increased Production Urged.

Dealing with the question of economy, the premier recommended the familiar specific of increased production. His remarks on Ireland gave no new information regarding the measure to be introduced.

Colonel Sidney Peel, coalition unionist, who made the reply to the address from the throne, said:

"It will be a grievous disappointment to us if the United States winds itself unable to take part in the work of reconstruction, but she must be master of her own house, as we are of ours."

Treaty Revision Sought.

Sir Donald MacLean, urging revision of the treaty, said:

"One of the essentials of the guarantee was the fact, when the opposition agreed to it, that the signature of the president of the United States was appended. It does not now look as though this is going to be honored."

"I only hope I am wrong," he added, as Mr. Lloyd George indicated his dissent.

The American ambassador, John W. Davis, and the Canadian premier, Sir Robert L. Borden, were in the galleries.

branches of the national defense have become mutual.

"The assumption on which this cooperation has been carried out is that there need be no conflict between the recruiting interests of the two services. The regular forces appeal to the young man who is free to leave his home for a time and is able to give that entire time to his country, meanwhile deriving the physical and educational advantages of army training.

"The field of the national guard is among the much larger class of young men, who, owing either to domestic responsibilities or business prospects, cannot leave their homes but nevertheless desire to devote a portion of their spare time to preparing themselves for the service of their country.

"The recognition of this community of interests has resulted in most cordial relations between national guardsmen and the local representatives of the general recruiting service.

Citizen Army Desired

"Every effort is being exerted to make the regular establishment a real citizen army, one with the people, of, by, and for whom it exists. An army, whose purpose is to build up men and improve them physically, mentally, morally, and return them to the communities whence they came better wage earners, better producers and better citizens.

"You are aware of the plans for building up the national guard of your state. It is my desire to bring also to the full knowledge of the country, all that the army will do in education and training for the men who enlist in its ranks and to facilitate the continuance of a complete understanding between the army and the people as to their mutual obligations and their common interests. Our army must have men in order to carry on the necessary work of the military establishment. It must in turn accept responsibility for the care and training of its men to a degree which will enable them to return to their communities with greatly improved qualification for earning a livelihood and performing the duties of citizenship.

"It is important for you to know and I am sure it will arouse keen interest on the part of the citizens of your state to learn that by my direction the following allocation of regiments for recruiting purposes has been made:

"To Oregon, Idaho and Montana: The 25th infantry.

"To Oregon, Montana, Washington, North Dakota and South Dakota: The 7th field artillery.

"To Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Washington, Wyoming, North and South Dakota: The 15th cavalry, the 8th engineers.

"To Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Washington, North and South Dakota: The 5th regiment, coast artillery corps.

"These regiments will, I hope, by our united efforts, be built up of men from these states. If you will identify your state with the organizations to which its men go, keep in touch with their activities, and make their interests your interests, they will be developed in these units not only a spirit of pride and emulation second to none, but also a deep and abiding mutual respect and interest between the citizen in uniform and the citizen out of uniform that will build up a real citizen army backed by the good will and affection of the people.

Governor's Help Urged

"The mothers and fathers of our country are vitally interested in having their sons educated and trained to be the real bulwark of the nation and we are prepared in the regular army as never before, at our camps, posts, stations and schools to give them this education and training which produced such marvelous results for America in the World war and which the members of the Amer-

"Although this special recruiting campaign extends from January 15 to March 31, 1920, yet for the week ending February 22, 1920, we are going to make a supreme effort throughout the country. We need your help and that of all your assistants in state, county, city and hamlet and if during the period commencing with this great national anniversary you or any of your communities desire the help of the war department in furnishing officers and soldiers to make addresses, attend celebrations, unite with your citizens in patriotic demonstrations, you may rest assured that I shall meet your wishes to the fullest extent possible."

tially all of the injury occurred. But the conditions in these sections, while not entirely favorable, are by no means hopeless, and we would therefore strongly urge growers to suspend judgment until early summer when trees that have a chance to survive will surely show it and when a course of action regarding all the trees may be more intelligently mapped out.

Little Pruning Urged.

Meanwhile, only moderate pruning, if any, should be practiced, but the best horticultural care should be given to afford the trees every chance and if any fruit-trees are known to be frozen through and dead to the snow line and it is desired to graft them the more quickly they can be cut to sound wood the better chance they will have to survive. In that case it will be the same as cutting off a healthy tree to the same point for grafting.

"As for the outlook for a cherry crop it does not appear promising on the bottoms, but is excellent in the hill sections. The cherry trees and branches were injured the same as prunes. In fact, the same type of injury occurred on nearly all fruits. Cherry buds, however, are more tender than almost any other fruit, the peach excepted. The few peach trees we saw in the hills did not appear to be greatly damaged, but on Keizer bottom every one we looked at was killed back.

"There is very slight injury to apples on bottom land, more to Baldwin than any other variety, and usually it is worse on the south side of the trees. Such trees will come through with possibly only a dead patch of bark over the most severe injury. Occasionally the entire cambium area appears discolored, but this is not the rule.

Most Peers Safe.

"We have not observed any injury to untrellised loganberries.

"Pears probably show more injury generally than prunes, but here again it is mostly confined to low bottom lands. Hoses is invariably damaged more than any other commercial variety, with Bartlett a close second. Anjou, Comice and Clairgeat are all generally in good condition. Even in the moist districts Anjou trees look favorable. The pith in young twigs and spurs is generally blackened, but this need cause no great alarm. Pear buds are frequently damaged, but except where the trees themselves fail to survive, we think there is a chance for a fair crop of pears. In some instances, however, we should not be surprised to see trees bloom heavily enough, but fail to mature much of a crop.

"On the whole, we think the Salem section is to be congratulated that the injury appears to be so localized, and that the most important fruit sections appear to have escaped serious damage."

MAGICIAN KEEPS CROWD GUESSING

Tonight Blackstone Promises to Expose Tricks of Spirit Mediums

The magic-tingered Blackstone now giving a series of entertainments at the Grand theater, was apparently in full command of the spirits of the unseen world during the exhibition last night.

Material things, living and inanimate, appeared in weird succession at the demand of the magician in full view of the astonished gazers.

A full grown turkey was apparently plucked out of the vacant air. A bevy of Pekin ducks—real ducks—suddenly appeared lazily floating on the surface of a tub of water right in the center of the stage. They then struggled over the edge and waddled off the stage like well trained actors.

Blackstone literally caught two pretty white doves out of the air where a moment before nothing could be seen.

Empty boxes were exposed in full view of the audience, a cover placed over them. When the lid was removed up arose a pretty maiden. A floating human body disappeared before the very eyes of an inspection committee. An elusive handkerchief danced a merry jig. The spirit rappings of an uncanny human hand told the astonished audience that Oregon would not reinstate capital punishment and that Hoover would not be elected president of the United States.

The two young men who accepted the wager of $50 that they could not nail Blackstone so securely into a box that he could not get out did not win the money. The necromancer though with both hands and feet securely tied and himself nailed into the box, made his escape, while screened for a few minutes from the view of the audience. He performed apparently the impossible. How did he get out? Who knows? Blackstone alone can tell—but he remains silent.

Tonight Blackstone promises to expose some of the tricks practiced by mediums as seances. He will give an expose of spirit tests, exhibit a spirit cabinet on the stage and promises to answer any and all questions, however carefully the inquis-

Court Must Advertise Before Bonds Are Sold

A county court has no right to sell bonds without advertising for bids, Attorney General Brown holds in an opinion written for Gollier H. Buffington, district attorney for Curry county. It appears from Mr. Buffington's letter that the county court, over the protest of one member and without advertising, voted to sell county bonds at 3 per cent under the market price. The attorney general advises the district attorney that he has a right to institute suit to restrain the court from selling the bonds.

Twelve Million Teeth Lost

IT is estimated that twelve million decayed teeth are pulled out every year by dentists in the United States.

Every one of the twelve million teeth had to be taken out because of neglect. If the people who lost these teeth had gone to a dentist soon enough, all could have been saved.

Think—how many kinds of aches there must have been in these twelve million teeth! Think how much suffering and sickness were caused by neglect!

Why not have Registered Dentists using the E. R. Parker System examine your teeth and tell you what ought to be done to save them? It will cost nothing to find out.

SIGHT Is Most Precious Faculty

We can ill spare any one of the faculties with which we are endowed but of the five senses we can least afford to lose that of eyesight; which, after all, is but another way of saying that vision is our most precious gift.

The total loss of vision is justly regarded as a dire calamity. The terror of which is diminished by the consoling reflection that very few ever go blind.

Ignorance and Injury

The people of today are inflicting grave injury upon their eyesight, simply because they do not understand it until too late.

Neglect is robbing us of good vision. Eyesight changes constantly, but so slowly that it is not until the harm is done that suspicion is aroused.

Town Dwellers' Eyes

Most modern occupations entail excessive use of the eyes at close range—and a few years of such concentration is sufficient to render most eyes almost incapable of seeing anything distinctly at a greater distance than that to which they have grown accustomed.

Reading, needlework, and all similar "close work" inevitably affects the eyes more or less seriously, according to their natural strength or otherwise.
