Some Peoples Eyes Are Perfect

But not many. Most of us have more or less defective eyes. Some scarcely use their eyes for close work—their occupations do not demand it. Consequently they may reach old age before realizing that anything is wrong with their eyes.

Trying Eye Work

Everything nowadays tends to cause more eye-work. More reading is done, often under unsuitable conditions; this, and other things tax our eyes and aggravate small defects which might otherwise pass unnoticed. And because we need the clearest of vision we are anxious the moment it begins to fail.

Glasses are very desirable long before the sight begins to fail. They should be such glasses as exactly compensate for the defects and make you see clearly without effort.
