

SOCIETY

By RUTH LENORE FISHER

BECAUSE of so much illness and sojourn in California. They among the families of the social set almost all of the parties and social affairs have been cancelled, many women who have planned parties have decided to give them later either because she herself or most of her guests have been stricken with the influenza.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Craig are home after a several months tour

Mrs. U. G. Shipley will entertain the auxiliary of the St. Paul's church this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at her home for the regular meeting of the society.

Mr. W. C. Knighton of Portland spent Tuesday in Salem with her mother, Mrs. E. E. Waters.

The many friends of Mrs. U. G. "Holt" who were shocked to hear of her serious operation last Saturday at the Salem hospital will be glad to learn that she is a little better.

Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Durdall were in Portland Wednesday to spend the day. Motorin down with them were their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Durdall of Summit, who have been spending the week with them.

Friends of Mrs. Fred Ellis will be sorry to learn that she is ill at her home with influenza.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Kimball who have been living at their country home in Polk county will be interested to learn that they have recently purchased the O. B. Durdall home at Chemeketa and Summer streets and will soon occupy it. Mr. and Mrs. Durdall will leave the first of April for Newport to remain until early autumn.

There is a Y.W.C.A. in Jerusalem under the direction of an American woman though the work is administered under the World's Committee of the Y.W.C.A., which has headquarters in London. During the war a fund called the "Syrian and Palestine Relief Fund" made possible work in this remote region. Later on the activity was taken under the American Red Cross and administered as a part of their world-wide relief during the war. Very lately the Red Cross withdrew from Jerusalem and the Y.W.C.A. was urged to carry on the work. Miss Grace O. Straug of Pasadena, Cal., a Red Cross worker, was released to carry on this Y.W.C.A. work.

Cecil T. Shafer, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Shafer of 1266 State street has returned home after serving his time in the United States navy, coming from Charleston, S. C., where he received his honorable discharge. During the war he visited many countries and had some exciting experiences.

Henry Anderson Passes After Prolonged Sickness

SILVERTON, Or., Feb. 19.—(Special to The Statesman.)—Henry Anderson, son of Mrs. Christian Anderson, died at his home in Evans Valley Monday. Mr. Anderson had been ill for over a year. He was 20 years

GIRLS! A MASS OF WAVY, GLEAMY BEAUTIFUL HAIR

Let "Danderine" save and glorify your hair

In a few moments you can transform your plain, flat, dull hair. You can have it abundant, soft, glossy and full of life. Just get at any drug or toilet counter a small bottle of "Danderine" for a few cents. Then moisten a soft cloth with the Danderine and draw this through your hair taking one small strand at a time. Instantly, yes, immediately, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will be a mass so soft, lustrous, fluffy and so easy to do up. All dust, dirt and excessive oil is removed. Let Danderine put more life, color, vigor and brightness in your hair. This stimulating tonic will freshen your scalp, check dandruff and falling hair, and help your hair to grow long, thick, strong and beautiful.

Funeral services were held from the St. Johns church Wednesday afternoon and interment was in the Evans Valley cemetery.

AUTHOR SLATED FOR SALEM TALK

Dr. Frank Bohn Attraction at Armory on March 11—War Work Told

Dr. Frank Bohn, the well known author, publicist and lecturer, will appear in Salem on the evening of March 11 at the armory.

This announcement is good news to the public for they will be given the rare privilege of hearing one of the best known lecturers on the platform today.

Dr. Bohn was in Europe before the war as a representative of the New York Evening Post. He had an opportunity to study conditions then. During the war he acted as a war correspondent for the New York Times, and at the conclusion of the war he continued to study economic and political conditions.

No one knows better than Dr. Bohn the problems of reconstruction which Europe now faces. He will speak here on the work of rebuilding Europe. He is a trained observer, an internationalist in spirit and a courageous exponent of the truth.

No one who is interested in present day problems should feel that he hears this great lecturer when he appears in this city.

Following Dr. Bohn, on March 13, the Ricketts Glee club, a male quartet from Chicago, will give a grand concert in the Opera house.

ALDRICH GIVES INSPIRING TALK

Boys of Hi Y Enjoy Good Feed and Talk on Habits at Regular Meeting

Rev. H. N. Aldrich of the Leslie M. E. church gave an interesting and forceful talk to the members of the Hi Y club at their weekly meeting at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday evening.

The Hi Y club is a local organization of the boys of the Salem high school that meets at the Y. M. C. A. every Thursday evening to enjoy a banquet prepared for them by the young women of the high school. The main object of the club is to promote good fellowship and advance the morale of the younger men of the city. At present the attendance record of the meetings averages between 35 and 50 members.

Last night Rev. Aldrich spoke on "How Habits of Youth Form Destiny." The subject, which was well received, dealt with the manner in which well-cultivated habits form the foundation for a real man of successful ability.

There are two Bible classes held at the meetings, in charge of Harold Eakin and Raymond Atterbury. Secretary James Elvin is in charge of the meetings, assisted by Mr. Eakin and Mr. Atterbury. This organization is one of the best organized and successfully conducted clubs of its kind in the state of Oregon.

The delicious repast that delighted all present and satisfied their regional cavity was prepared by Salem high school girls, the Misses Margaret Griffith, Leatha Wilson, Dorothy Patterson, Janet Meredith and Nellie Rowland.

Looks as if Pancho Villa is preparing to play off a number of double headers.

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

The Story of a Honeymoon

A Wonderful Romance of Married Life Wonderfully Told by ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER DXXIII

WHY MADGE DETERMINED TO CHAMPION KATIE'S CAUSE.

I had hard work to draw my face down in proper disapproval when Katie tearfully told me the retort she had made to Cousin Agatha, the unexpected guest who had come to our home with my mother-in-law, and who had brutally quizzed Katie concerning the girl's secret, accusing her of deceiving me.

Katie had called the woman "vun old liar" and had fled to me in a perfect paroxysm of tears and sobs and demands for Jim, her husband, our man of all work, of whose existence Cousin Agatha evidently did not know.

"Don't you see how hard those speeches of yours make it for me, Katie?" I asked reproachfully, although secretly I gloried in the girl's grit in thus facing her tormentor. "I could defend you, if you had simply walked out of the room without answering her. But now she also has a grievance."

"I no care." Katie's tone was sullen. "I think you say same ting yourself if strange voman you never saw before talk like dot to you."

"Well, it can't be helped or un-said now," I said briskly, "but I want you to do as I tell you. Will you?"

"I not go ask her forgive me if I never see you again," Katie uttered the words as though the worst punishment she could receive would be banishment from me.

"I don't wish you to go near her," I said. "I want you to stay right here and finish the dinner. You may lock the door if you wish, so you'll be sure no one will disturb you."

"Do I have to wait on table?" she inquired. Her hands were trembling pitifully.

"Not if you don't feel like it," I answered, and then I stooped and kissed my wee-begone little maid with a feeling of hot indignation in my heart against the woman who had caused such needless suffering.

She clung to me convulsively. "Oh, if only all de vimmen in world vere like you, Missis Graham," she breathed gratefully, and foolishly extravagant words went with me as I climbed the stairs to my mother-in-law's room. I felt that I would a million times rather be "too easy" than to have caused the suffering Cousin Agatha had inflicted in the last hour.

I had no hope that I had heard the last of the encounter. I was morally sure that Cousin Agatha was only awaiting the earliest opportunity to demand reprisal for the insulting words that Katie, maddened by her unjust accusation, had flung at her. But I was firmly resolved that she would have to make her own opportunity to speak. I would have her no opening that I could possibly keep closed.

I went into my own room and shut the door softly, looking around with discouraged eyes. In trying to get everything possible done before the actual moving day—for I detest having a wildly confusing time at the last minute, if it possibly can be avoided—I had dismantled my room, even to taking up the rug and tying up the furniture. I had packed the drawers of my chiffonier and dresser and locked them, had the bed taken down and for two nights had slept on an army cot, a comfortable enough bed, but one which I knew I could never offer to Cousin Agatha.

Only One Thing—

My mother-in-law had announced upon the unexpected arrival of the two women that each must have a separate room. There were only two habitable bedrooms now in the house, Dicky's and his mother's. But the impulse that came to me to ask Dicky to give up his room to his mother's cousin and let me make up a temporary bed for him on the couch in the library died almost before it was born. I recalled previous domestic crises and Dicky's selfish behavior when I asked him to share any inconvenience with me. I wouldn't risk a similar rebuff now. My nerves were in too raw a state to wish any further unpleasantness.

There was only one thing to be done. I must call Jim and instruct him to put up the bed he had just recently taken down, lay the rug he had taken up, had beaten, had cleaned thoroughly and had rolled up, and bring back to its accustomed order the room I had fondly imagined was already for moving imagined was all ready for moving. There was work for me, scarves and draperies and toilet articles to take from the places where I had packed them and to put back into the room that it might be habitable for a guest.

I had just risen with a sigh and had opened my door preparatory to summoning Jim, when I came face to face with Cousin Agatha, who had come from my mother-in-law's room. (To be continued.)

TRADE MARK PUROLA MARK AIDS TO HEALTH AND BEAUTY

An important part of every child's education should be cleanliness

And keeping the throat and mouth and nostrils clean is even more important than seeing that the surface dirt on face and hands is removed.

Children—and some adults, too—should be taught to brush their teeth correctly—from the gums upward and from the gums downward, not across the teeth. Then they should use a reliable astringent mouth wash and gargle. When you use you use a zinc chloride antiseptic mouth wash—astringent, healing and deodorant—useful for pyorrhea, catarrh, tonsillitis, sore throat and as a preventive for contagion.
