Patronize Business Men Who Assist in Development, Says Mr. Clark

When the local baseball club needs new suits who do you go to for the donation? Who contributes to the church social? Who pays for the street assessments for paving the main street of your town.

These are the questions asked the residents of the State of Oregon by A. G. Clark, manager of the Associated Industries of Oregon, in his effort to create a larger consumption of Oregon products.

Consumers who buy from concerns other than those of their own locality do not realize that they are sending away money that could be used in the development of their own community. They do not see that when money is needed for local development it must come from the merchant or the manufacturer who is located in the community, and not the outside concern.

Oregon manufacturers and business men of all classes have willingly Captured Chinaman Is given jobs to returned soldiers. It remains for the consumers now to demand Oregon-Made products to keep these factories and business houses going and thus create steady employment for men returned from overseas.

"It is absolutely vital to the continued prosperity of the state," said Mr. Clark, in a recent interview. "that the consumer realize the ne cessity of buying home products.

'The Oregon merchants, manufacturers and farmers will do their part if the consumer will only ask for Oregon Made goods. They are only waiting for the chance to prove that Oregon can produce just as good products as any state in theu nion.'
