Full Capacity Has Not Been Reached in New Plant of Bishop Brothers

The following article copied from Unruh, G. E. justice the March 1 issue of the Humbodit Standard, the evening newspaper published at Eureka, Humboldt county, Calif., will be of interest to many readers of The Statesman. The article was accompanied by a picture of the mills.

"The machinery of the former Humboldt Bay Woolen mills, now known as the Eureka Woolen mills, was started up again about two weeks ago and soon it is expected to have the mills working full force. At present about 30 hands are employed in the manufacture of blankets and flannels, but as soon as the remaining and some additional machinery can be made ready the force will be increased to about 50 and the making of suiting cloth will be begun The Eureka mills are now part of the Bishop brothers' plants in Oregon, their purchase having been made necessary by the rush of orders at the Oregon mills. The local mills have been incorporated separately with C M. Bishop, formerly of Salem, Oregon, president of the company, F. E. McGee vice president and local manager in charge of the mills here, and P. Slade, secretary-treasurer.

off the power of an engine.

In a Maxwell there is hardly a superfluous pound. Like a great cross country runner, it carries no handicap in weight.

It is made of fine steels, and these steels have that magic combination that metallurgists strive for-light weight and extra strength.

These steels are made to order for Maxwell. They are treated in great furnaces, and they are strong beyond belief.

Pound for pound, they equal the steels in any car built. But they more than repay for their high cost.

They wear. They stand terrific abuse. They defy time. But their greatest task is to lighten the burden of the Maxwell engine, enable it to perform brilliantly, and make gasoline deliver extended mileage.

Thus you will understand that rise of Maxwell the world over, that ever growing friendship, that ever increasing demand.

Today nearly 400,000 in use. In 1920, 100,000 more. Still this will fill but 60% of the world's requirements for this remarkable car.
