

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

The Story of a Honeymoon

A Wonderful Romance of Married Life Wonderfully Told by ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 568

WHY KATHERINE COMPLAINS OF JACK'S INCONSISTENCY

Katherine Sonnot turned a face full of entreaty toward me as Lillian Underwood, in a mood of relaxation from the mental strain which she had just undergone, declared her intention of getting hold of my husband and of Katherine's fiancé and having them come over to dinner. Betty, Lillian's colored cook, had retired to her room in a "weepy tantrum," as Lillian described it, and as a consequence Lillian had to finish the dinner Betty had begun.

For Sagging or Hanging Cheeks and Chin

Flabbiness of cheeks, chin or neck was considered very difficult to correct until the discovery of what has proved to be a veritable wonder-worker for such conditions. The preparation is so simple and harmless any woman can easily make and apply it. It is all the more remarkable in that its beneficial effects are apparent even after the very first application, both as to appearance and the feeling of comfort produced. The formula is: One ounce powdered axolite, dissolved in one-half pint of witch hazel. Use daily as a wash lotion. The solution tends to contract and solidify the loosened, baggy tissue, smoothing out the folds, creases and wrinkles, besides having a refining influence on skin of coarse texture and large pores. As witch hazel and axolite can be had at any drug store, anyone can try this successful recipe.

"We'll make the boys help us cook the dinner, and we'll serve and eat it in regular picnic style right here in the library," Lillian said gleefully as she started for the telephone. "I don't dare leave the room unguarded now for a moment, and it will be great sport to eat up here. Don't you think so?"

I tried to make my assent as hearty as her suggestion—but Katherine's unhappy face chilled my tone. I saw that she actually dreaded the presence of Jack Bickett, her fiancé and my brother-in-law, at this impromptu dinner, and my conscience smote me anew that I had so long neglected the interview I meant to have with Jack, and the scoring I meant to give him for the suffering his unreasonable jealousy was inflicting upon my little friend.

As soon as Lillian had gone down to the telephone—she had none in her library work-shop, where she insisted upon absolute seclusion while she worked—Katherine came over to me.

"Isn't there any way of my getting out of this?" she asked anxiously. "Jack and I had a quarrel two days ago and I haven't seen him since. I can't meet him here, before all of you, dear friends as you are."

"You can't very well go away either," I said slowly, for I had the usual feminine optimism about healing lovers' quarrels when they weren't my own. "Lillian has evidently quite set her heart upon this little informal festivity."

"Jack Is Furious."

"I know," Katherine returned. "And I am a beast to allow my own preferences to interfere with her pleasure in any way. How wonderful she is! One minute engineering delicate operations in which the very safety of the nation may be involved, and at the very first chance of relaxation putting everything behind her and planning an informal frolic with as much zest as a child. I suppose that's the way she is able to keep up her strength and spirits for the crises which must come her way. But oh, Madge, my dear, please make Jack give you all his attention tonight. Keep him so busy talking that he won't have time to bother about me. I simply can't talk to him."

"Is there anything new?" I asked, sure that I would not offend my little friend by my question—she had already weeks before confided in me that my brother-in-law was jealous of Dr. Braithwaite, the noted surgeon, Dicky's brother-in-law, who was her employer, the head of the hospital unit to which she belonged, and for the business of which she was temporarily in this country.

"Yes, there is," she replied. "The work for which I came is almost finished, and Dr. Braithwaite wishes me to return to my work there. He had written to me to come back before, and then a few days after America entered the war he cabled me to wind up things as soon as possible and take the first ship I could back. I believe he wishes me to take one of his most important positions."

"And Jack is furious. He won't listen to reason at all; doesn't seem to realize that I am sworn to the nursing service, that I cannot leave it for any trivial reason. I think Lillian hypnotized me today. I can help her in her secret work, of course when I am here, but I don't see any way out of going back, although sometimes I wish I could. There are reasons you know, why I would rather do Lillian's work than the task that confronts me."

What Of Dicky?

"Yes, I know," I returned, for I remembered the shy, half-ashamed confidence she had given me concerning the interest Dr. Braithwaite had taken in her, the dependence he had come to place upon her while his wife, Dicky's sister, was ill.

It was an interest that might have become sentimental, had it not been for the calm good sense of the older woman, who thoroughly understood her husband's temperament, and who had cannily arranged with Katherine for the girl's work in the United States until he should have gotten back to his usual routine of thought. That there was no more danger of sentiment on the great surgeon's part I was sure, because of the summons which had come for Katherine. Harriet Braithwaite was not the woman to allow a possible rival to come back into her husband's life. Nor, on the other hand, if she were convinced her Edwin "were himself again," would she allow any pettiness of her own to stand in the way of Katherine's advancement.

"But the thing that hurts me most in Jack," Katherine went on, "is his inconsistency. He is simply frantic to go back himself—now that we're at war, is trying vainly to have himself pronounced cured of those terrible wounds he received. And he cannot understand that I feel just as anxious as he does to serve my country."

I scarcely heard her last words, for her first ones kept ringing in my ears.

"Jack is simply frantic to go back—"

And Alfred Durkee had enlisted! Why did Dicky remain so persistently silent on the subject?

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

Soap should be used very carefully if you want to keep your hair looking its best! Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified coconut oil shampoo at any pharmacy; it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

More Candidates Seek for Political Office

Additional candidates who filed with the secretary of state yesterday were:

J. H. Crane, Ardenwald station, for Republican nomination for representative from the 17th representative district.

C. J. Edwards, Tillamook, for Republican nomination for state senator from the 24th senatorial district.

Lee M. Travis, Eugene, Democratic candidate for delegate to the national convention from the first congressional district.

L. D. Brown, Dallas, for Democratic nomination for representative in the legislature from the 11th district.

E. C. McFarland, Portland, for Republican nomination for representative in the legislature from the 18th district.

L. M. Depper, Portland, for Republican nomination for state senator from the 13th district.

J. H. Batchelder, Lakeview, for Republican nomination for circuit judge for the 14th judicial district.

Ivan G. Martin, Salem, for Republican nomination for representative in the legislature from the first district.

W. H. Waterbury, Newport, for Republican nomination for district attorney for Lincoln county.

George J. Cameron, Portland, for Republican nomination for delegate to the national convention from the state at large.

Willamette in Campaign to Raise Needed Funds

Willamette university is starting a campaign to raise $100,000 for the purpose of completing Lausanne and Waller halls. Lausanne hall is the new dormitory that is being built as a residence home for women students.

The rapid growth of Willamette's student body during the last few years has made it necessary to provide housing accommodations under school supervision for a larger number of women students. Last year old Lausanne hall was condemned as being unsafe for further use, and the trustees immediately began the construction of a new and larger hall. However, more funds are needed for the completion of the building.

Waller hall is the building which was partially destroyed by fire during last Christmas vacation. In it was Willamette's chapel room, the chemistry laboratory and recitation rooms, and the club rooms of the various literary societies. Its unusable condition has been a great inconvenience to the college, and it is hoped that it will be restored by June so that the graduating exercises may be held in the chapel room as usual.

Besides the reconstruction of the original it is planned to enlarge and remodel the building to such an extent that the college library can be located on the second floor, including a small fireproof room in which the records of the university and its societies may be safely stored.

Third Candidate Files for Service Commission

Charles L. Brown of Portland yesterday filed his declaration as a candidate for public service commissioner, to represent the western Oregon district. He is the third in the race, the other two being Fred C. Buchtel, incumbent chairman of the commission, and E. M. Cousins of Portland.

Miles Poindexter filed as a candidate for president of the United States, his name to go on the Oregon primary Republican ballot.

Starkweather Candidate Against Mr. Chamberlain

Harvey G. Starkweather of Milwaukie filed with the secretary of state his declaration of candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States senator in opposition to George E. Chamberlain. Mrs. Alexander Thompson, who has been a member of two regular and one special session of the legislature, filed as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for representative to congress from the third congressional district. Mrs. Thompson lives in Portland.

Slayer Who Quit Salem Is Arrested at El Paso

Warden Compton of the state penitentiary was informed yesterday in a telegram from the police department at El Paso, Tex., that A. B. Poster, slayer of Lawrence Goodell in Portland had been arrested there. Goodell, upon conviction, was sentenced to the penitentiary. He was transferred to the state tuberculosis hospital and escaped from that institution March 6. He killed Goodell April 25, 1919.

Moffitt Is Candidate for Chief of Police

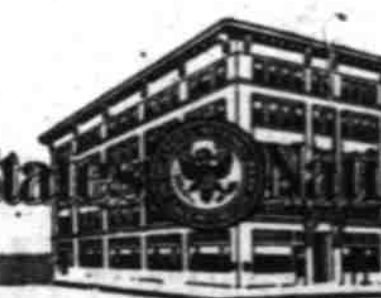

Verden M. Moffitt Monday filed with City Recorder Earl Race his declaration as a candidate for the office of chief of police. His opponents in the race are J. T. Welsh, present chief, and George Patterson.

Moffitt, who is an ex-service man, has served for several months as traffic officer, and was a candidate for chief of police to succeed P. M. Varney when Welsh was elected by the city council.

"THE OLD WAY IS MY WAY"

ONCE in a while you hear a farmer say that when something new is proposed in the way of production or method of producing. But the number is gradually lessening as practical theory is turned into profit by those who would rather pioneer than follow suit.

A bank like the United States National can do much to help the farmer keep in the march of progress.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked, or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.
