WILLAMETTE UNIVERSITY SUNDAY

(Editorial in Pacific Christian Advocate)

Bishop Hughes, just before he left Portland a few weeks ago, designated next Sunday, April 18th, as Willamette University Day, and sent a letter to the pastors of the Oregon Conference asking them to observe the same. Never before had he asked the pastors to set aside a day for any special feature, and we shall honor his memory by conforming to his wishes in this matter.

What is the object of a special day?

Willamette University needs help, and needs it immediately.

Waller Hall, which was almost destroyed by fire, must be restored; the new Lausanne Hall, a dormitory and home for young ladies, must be built; and other betterments are needed for the accommodation of the enlarged student body.

A few facts will indicate the greatness of the needs of the University. The enrollment now is 446, an increase of forty per cent over that of last year; some of the classes are compelled to meet in rooms in the First Methodist Church; chapel services are held in the church and they have been cut from five to two a week; and young women attending the University lack the facilities which they should enjoy. A condition confronts the trustees, and they are just entering upon a campaign in order to meet it in a satisfactory way.

After a careful examination of the situation by a competent committee it has been decided that a fund of $100,000 is necessary at this time to do the things indicated above. The Laymen's Association of the Oregon Conference stands squarely behind the proposition and proposes to see it through. Headquarters have been opened in Room 505 Platt Building, Portland, from which the campaign is to be handled.

No one who ever heard Bishop Hughes in an educational address will doubt for a moment his enthusiasm over the undertaking, nor fail to appreciate his high motive in naming Willamette University Sunday. It was his wish, as well as that of the committee in charge of the work, that the story of the University be told, its achievements in Christian education related, the urgent needs of the present situation made known in all our churches, and the fullest co-operation with the financial managers encouraged.

Bishop Hughes often referred to Willamette University as the greatest single interest of Methodism in Oregon, and so it is. Let it be held aloft next Sunday in all our Churches.

Have you overalls?

Watch West Salem grow.

The overall craze is spreading over all the country.

They are already discussing in Washington what church the new president will attend.

If the movement back to overalls and calico is accompanied by a great movement back to the soil, great good will be accomplished.

The wholesale stealing of sheep is reported from Palestine and the shepherds are watching their flocks.

all seated on the ground, every night.

The building of new dwellings by Mr. Bush in West Salem and Kingwood Park will help a lot. Now, if every one interested in the growth and prosperity of Salem will pull together for the sale of more shares of the local building and loan association, and stick to it till the weekly payments are doubled, then doubled again, and then doubled once more, there will be enough new dwellings erected in Salem to accommodate the new people. And it will all be done with local money. And it will all be done at a sure profit for all concerned.

IN THE BEGINNING.

The churches are willing to spend ten million dollars or more to combat the Reds and purpose to do it through training schools to teach Americanism to immigrants and to alien children. They would purify the stream as near the source as possible, which is the safe and sane method.

TWEEDLE-DUM AND TWEEDLE-DEE.

Replying to a query from a woman voter who asked the difference between the political beliefs of a Democrat and a Republican, the New York World says editorially: "There is this fundamental difference between a Democrat and a Republican; a Democrat in government is concerned primarily with personal rights and a Republican is concerned primarily with property rights."

How nice! According to the World's theory the capitalists are all Republicans and the anarchists are all Democrats. But how about the great majority of Americans who live neither from incomes, inherited or acquired early in life, nor by their wits, whose personal rights and property rights are so interwoven that you cannot strike one without hitting the others?

What is the first of personal rights?

The right of the inalienable possession of the fruits of one's industry.

It is upon that right that civilization is based. Destroy it and civilization crumbles.

But the right of possession is a property right. The reply of the

Wearing Glasses At Night

Did you ever find that when out of doors at night you can see better without your glasses than you can with them? It is easily explained.

In the first place, the two necessary requirements for seeing well are, a correct focus and good light. Optical lenses give the correct focus but they also reflect part of the light. In the daytime, when there is plenty of light, the reflection from the lenses is not noticed. But at night, when the light is dim, the amount reflected by the lenses reduces the total amount of light so much that you can see better if you take off your glasses.

It is only through study and experience that an optical specialist can hope to render a service that is capable of giving to any pair of eyes, no matter what their individual requirements may be, the exactly correct pair of glasses that will keep their vision up to its maximum best. That is the kind of service which we are prepared to render. It ranges all the way from single vision lenses to help eyes that are overworked, to the wonderfully fine lenses for both near and far vision as represented by Kryptoks (pronounced Crip-tocks) the only invisible bifocals.

World becomes thus as fine a piece of sophistry as has been uttered during the present campaign. Distinguishing between personal rights and property rights is like trying to come between the tree and the bark. Remove the bark and the tree dies for want of nourishment, while the bark becomes a worthless, empty hull.

Free exercise of personal rights is possible only in the savage state. As soon as communities are formed, the individual right must give way to the right of the greatest number. Property rights are equally limited; for every right under a free government entails a corresponding duty. The possessors of property must bear the entire expense of government. They must educate the children of those who are too profligate or too unfortunate to be able to educate their own offspring. They must pay the expense of protecting life and health and of punishing malefactors. They must care for every member of the community who, for any reason, is not able to care for himself. If they fail to use their property for any one of these purposes it is seized by the state and sold for taxes.

It has been truly said that a man does not own the property assessed to his name but that his property owns him.

Thoreau found that the person enjoying the greatest degree of independence in modern American life was the day laborer; and, although a Harvard graduate, he chose that vocation. He could earn enough in 40 days to keep him for the other 325 days of the year. His leisure belonged to himself alone; and he used it in a way that has made many consider him the greatest man of his generation. But Thoreau was, by preference, a Republican.

The distinction between personal rights and property rights is a distinction without a difference. They are as inseparable as sunlight and shadow. Perhaps this is the impression that the World in its wisdom intended to convey when distinguishing between a Democrat and a Republican; for the World has announced that it has broken all party ties and will support Herbert Hoover for president on any ticket.

Proudhon said that all property is theft; Roosevelt said that unrestricted personal liberty is a state of anarchy; and there you are.

THE VLADIVOSTOK COUP.

Japan's sudden seizure of Vladivostok will be looked upon with mixed feelings in Washington and in the capitals of the allies. It indicates that the military element at Tokio is still in the ascendant and that the fears, recently expressed, of a Japanese plot to control Siberia were not without foundation. Probably Premier Hara will attempt to justify the action of his government on the score that the capture of the city was necessary to prevent the Bolshevik from gaining control.

He recently declared, in an interview with a newspaper correspondent, that the Japanese cannot afford to permit Red influence to touch their territory.

He said they must protect themselves against it as they would against a great scourge.

This, on its face, sounds well; but Japan has for months been steadily seeking to establish control over Siberia and it will be hard to convince other nations that its occupancy of Vladivostok is not a part of a policy to practically rule that great country in the place of Russia. This much must be said for the Japanese; they frankly warned the world some months ago that they intended to take strong action at any time they deemed it necessary. Premier Hara expressed the hope that his government could go hand in hand with America, but he added, "whatever happens, either in allied councils or within Siberia, we must protect ourselves." It is doubtless believed at Tokio that the coup at Vladivostok is part of that policy of protection from the Reds.

JOHNSON'S MILLIONAIRE LIST.

(Los Angeles Times.)

Senator Johnson's millionaires' club presents one of the anomalies of the presidential campaign. In the east the senator is campaigning as the "candidate without a sack;" and the press reports indicate that it is his best act. But out here in California there are nine millionaires among the 26 delegates on the herited Southern Pacific millions; Frank P. Flint, banker of Los Angeles; Herbert Fleischacker, millionaire San Francisco banker; M. H. de Young, millionaire newspaper publisher; Joseph R. Knowland, millionaire banker and newspaper publisher of Oakland; James Rolph, millionaire ship owner; George I. Cochran and John B. Miller, two of the wealthiest members of the Los Angeles millionaire colony, and Mrs. C. K. McClatchy, wife of a Sacramento millionaire newspaper publisher! Lump them together and you have a nest egg of $150,000,000. Meyer Lissner, Johnson's southern California manager, had a great deal to do with the selection of that ticket; and Lissner is a practical politician of long and varied experience.

To the uninitiated it looks as though Lissner selected his delegates with the idea of making a touch.

Pity a poor candidate who has no financial backing—except a millionaires' club, a state machine and voluntary assessments levied on a few thousand members of organized labor.

That list of Johnson delegates reads very much like a promotion committee appointed to float a large bond issue. There is just the proper seasoning of union labor delegates to give it the appearance of a popular issue. It is choice bait to catch both the little investors and the big ones. But as a list of candidates for delegates to a national convention—if every state sent that kind of delegation—there would be the greatest assemblage of millionaires in Chicago ever gathered under one roof in the history of the country.

SEE THE HUMP.

They are mixing the sacred cow of India with the Texas longhorn and producing a breed of cattle that can stand a long drought and are proof against ticks. These animals took the blue ribbon at the recent Fort Worth stock fair. They show the chief characteristics of both strains. Naturally they are inclined to be wild and they carry the hump that goes with the beast from farther India. This hump, by the way, is said to be mighty good eating and it is a desirable extra for the table. First thing we know they will be trying to raise a breed with four or five humps to satisfy the tables of our millionaires.
