WHOLE NATION SENDS CAMPERS TO SALEM PARK

Visitations From Local Citizens Appreciated by Traveling Motorists

SITE BEST ON ROAD

Hydrants, Lights and Other Conveniences Draw Favorable Comment

According to the register at the city auto compaing grounds there have been 147 campers who have enjoyed the privileges of the grounds. A greater portion of these have come during the last few days. Twenty-seven campers were registered Friday, June 18, the largest contribution of any one day.

The campers, as registered, are from all parts of the United States, passing through Salem enroute to the northwest and Canadian points or are on their way north and middlewest points after having spent the winter in California.

However, according to T. G. Albert the camp ground superintendent, many of these people are in quest of new homes.

A couple of weeks ago a family named Thompson registered at the grounds enroute to Washington and confided to Mr. Albert that they were in search of a home. After spending a week looking over the prospects in the northern state they returned to Salem and purchased a place four miles from town on Jefferson road. They said, according to Mr. Albert, they could not find in any part of Washington the conveniences and the ideal climatic conditions that prevail in and around Salem. In their minds Salem was the best city, possessing ideal surroundings for a home, hence they purchased the Horner place on Jefferson road. They are at present at the camping grounds.

Hospitality Appreciated.

"After spending the night at the city camping grounds," said Mr. Albert, "the people leave with a high regard for the city of Salem and the hospitality they receive here from the businessmen and other townspeople who visit the campers during the cool hours of the evening."

The nightly visits at the camp grounds by townspeople are leaving enduring impressions with the auto travelers. It is a new experience in their journeys. As a rule campers are taboo in most cities within the city limits so when they come to Salem and find a free city camping ground near the heart of the city, equipped with several water hydrants electric lights and a free telephone service together with the interest shown in them by the local townspeople, they leave with a good impression of Salem and the type of its citizenry.

According to Mr. Albert, when the campers leave the grounds invariably their last remark is "Salem has the best camping grounds on the coast; we had a good time here." He claims that remarks similar to this have come from Shriners who are enroute to the convention in Portland passing through Salem by automobile.

Phone Serves Good Purpose.

Several days ago, a family passing through on their way to California camped at the grounds for the night, intending to move camp the next morning, but during the night one of their number, a small boy, became ill with acute pneumonia. A physician was quickly summoned through the telephone which is accessible to all campers at the grounds. The illness of the boy might have proved fatal had it not been for the fact that a physician could be called in a hurry.

Another case involving immediate medical attention came to the attention of Mr. Albert was when one of the campers, a woman, was badly scalded. She was preparing an evening meal before the fire when the lid of a boiling pot was dislodged by an excess of steam throwing some boiling water on her face. A physician was called and the woman is now confined in the Deaconess hospital.

The modern conveniences at the grounds are attracting many picnickers from nearby cities. Last Saturday a party of 13 spent the day in Salem at the grounds. The party came here in three cars from Newberg. Later in the same day a party from Portland spent a portion of the day at the grounds picnicking.

List of Campers.

The camping grounds is an alluring spot for the Gypsy Tour riders. A part of their activities were arranged so that a part of the program was held at the camping park. They held their high jinks by the huge bon-fire last night and many of them are planning to encamp there.

SALEM WINS MOST EVENTS ON CYCLES

that only two of the Salem men had been over the course before.

The first prize in each case was a motorcycle casing and the second prize an inner tube. These were given by the Goodyear Rubber company and the Firestone Rubber company.

Over 250 machines have arrived in Salem and more are coming from all parts of Oregon.

All of the visitors were taken to the Oregon theater last night from 5:30 to 7:15 to see the special films of the Ascot races and after the theater there was a bonfire, jubilee and entertainment at the city camp grounds.

Later in the evening a motorcycle dance was enjoyed at Auburn hall after which most of the boys decided they had had a large day and retired to await the big picnic which begins at 10:30 this morning. Several interesting events will take place at the picnic which will be held on the west side of the river, 5 1-2 miles north of Salem and the public is invited. There will be sand races, broad jumps, in which the riders will run their machines at full speed off of a raised plank, tag races, tug-of-war and several other thrilling events, in which the best riders of the northwest will compete.

"Whose fine house is that on the hill yonder?"

"That is the residence of Mr. Stonyfelier, our wealthiest citizen."

"How did he make his money? In oil?"

"Nope. Worked a couple of seasons in the Kansas wheat fields."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

AT THE LIBRARY

New Books.

"The Economic Consequences of the Peace," a criticism of the peace treaty, with a prophecy of economic disaster in its execution, by John Maynard Keynes.

"Marse Henry," recollections of a life that covers half the years of the life of the nation, full of historical facts, personal anecdotes, bits of gossip and personal convictions, by Henry Watterson.

"The House of Baltazar," the latest noval of William J. Locke.

"Red and Black," another of the Red Pepper Burns stories, by Grace Richmond.

"The Great Impersonation," a new mystery story by Edward Oppenheim.

"The Voice of the City," further stories of the Four Million, by Sydney Porter, better known as O. Henry.

For the Children.

"The Pearl Story Book" stories of the winter season, by Ada Skinner.

"What Happened to Inger Johanne," a Norwegian story of the lively pranks of a 13-year-old girl, by Dikken Zwilgmeyer.

"Peter and Polly in Winter," and "Peter and Polly in Summer," by Rose Lucia.

The Bookman for June lists in its "Books in greatest demand in public libraries" the first five titles of the books for adults. These are what library patrons of the entire country are reading. Other titles included in these lists which the library already has are: "Theodore Roosevelt's Letters to His Children," "Abraham Lincoln," by Drinkwater, "The Education of Henry Adams," "A Labrador Doctor," by Wilfred Grenfell and "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," by Ibanez.

WHERE EXTREMES MET

A negro cavalry-man was sent out alone to do some scouting along the Mexican border. Not being acquainted with the country he soon got lost and was gone several days. When he finally found his way back to camp the captain asked him what he saw.

"Boss," he said, "Ah could look the farthest and see the least. Ah saw the most cows and the least milk, the most creeks and the least watah, the mos, ground and the least grass, the most sky and the least grass, the most sky and the least clouds. Ah evah did see."

IT IS MORE BLESSED TO GIVE

"Heaven pity the wife," said Bishop Flipper of Atlanta, "who has to prompt her husband to do the right thing by her. Here is a pathetic case indeed."

"One man said to another in the first weeks of December:

"'What are you going to give your wife for a Christmas present?'

"The other man turned and answered:

"'I dunno yet. She put it away in a drawer yet before I had a chance to see it.'"

Five Years' Wanderings of Boy, Who Left Home at 8, End in New York

John Brandt.

"I want a room and bath," said John Brandt, thirteen years old, after he had signed his name with a flourish on the register of a well-known Broadway hotel in New York. Instead he got accommodations in the Children's Society rooms, where he was held at the request of the police of Norfolk, Va. John admitted that he ran away from his Virginia home when he was eight years old and has been "traveling" since he was ten. He said he had been on the Mexican border and had visited various army camps.
