

Flares and Flickers

"Let 'em down!" snarled Martin Berry, as the "Liddy Ann" headed for the rocks carrying his daughter and the man she loved. But his hate was turned to love, as you will learn when you see Alice Lake in "Shore Acres" at Ye Liberty theater, beginning next Sunday. It's a Metro production of James A. Heafne's celebrated stage play of the New England coast. Tremendous drama, delightful humor and tender sentiment are all in this unusual feature.

During the filming of "The Confession" at the National studios, in which Henry Walthall is starred, Director Bertram Bracken was successful in securing Father Cain of the local Catholic church to assist him in putting over properly many of the more dramatic scenes. Principal among these was the confession itself, a scene of extreme dramatic tension, the business of which having to do with the confession of the real criminal. Many little touches and suggestions were given Mr. Walthall by Father Cain, the result being the finished scene, correct in every detail.

The question of how far a train will run after it leaves the rails and just what a coach will withstand when an express crashes through a decayed bridge, is answered in "The Juggernaut" which will be shown at the Bligh theater today.

The Edna May-Foster trio offers what is conceded to be one of the best laughing novelty acts in vaudeville. Descended in a direct line from the earliest Mayflower settlers, the little artists are as ardently ripped by a very real pride of race as she is enveloped in an intense love of her work. At the Bligh today.

Let no one imagine that good motion pictures can be made without spending fortunes in money. In "The Long Arm of Mannister," which is to play a special engagement at the Liberty theater today, a 100-foot yacht was sent to the bottom of the Pacific ocean in the never ending quest for screen realism.

Authentic record photographed by German official photographer from the deck of the Kaiser's pet submarine, the U-35, during the trip on which she sank a hundred allied and neutral ships and took only six prisoners, showing at Ye Liberty today.

Dorothy Royce, neat little lady with a catchy collection of songs, mostly her own and restricted. Prettily dressed, together with likable personality, gives her membership in the department of popularity. At the Bligh today.

Written solely for the purpose of creating laughter, "The Bootleggers" the new comedy with music, which comes to the Bligh theater next Thursday under the banner of John J. MacArthur, serves one purpose only—that of tickling the risibilities of a jaded theater-going public. Ed Harris, Jack Sheehan and Eddie Gilbert are the three principal comedians, and the supporting company includes Lillian Crawford, Billy Mack, Peggy Martin, Joe James and a good chorus of singers.

Lester Raymond & Co., juggler who manhandles to keep up a rapid and original running barrage of patter and who never misses a trick in the entire run of it, is rare—and Lester Raymond is one of those. He is assisted by a young man, who does a "maid" character, and ably assists him! Mr. Raymond's forte is juggling, but he intermingles some tumbling, piano selections, and wonderfully too, for he manages to play a different selection with each hand simultaneously, some rope skipping and some pantomime that manages to keep one in smiles. At the Bligh today.

Nazimova, the screen's greatest actress, comes to Ye Liberty theater next Thursday in a picturization of Frank Danby's most celebrated novel "The Heart of a Child."

A double feature program at Ye Liberty today.

An Hilarious Job
Would you marry a handsome flirt on the chance of reforming him? Dorothy Gish does in her latest screen comedy, "Remodelling her husband," which is on the bill at the Oregon theater for Friday and Saturday.

Mae Murray, the pretty stage and screen player who is featured in the first George Fitzmaurice production, "On With The Dance," which is coming to the Oregon theater for three days commencing Tuesday, is another of the talented young actresses who has risen to stardom from the ranks of the Follies.

"Silk Husbands and Calico Wives," Equity Picture's special production starring House Peters, which is shown at the Oregon theater today, will be highly interesting to local movie picture devotees. The picture is based on Monte M. Katterjohn's popular novel of American life, a thoroughly and intensely modern story dealing with both country and city.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

Near summer days.

You can almost hear things grow.

School election tomorrow, at Marion hotel sample rooms, 2 to 7 p. m.

The Bits for Breakfast man intends to vote for Paul Wallace and Walter Winslow.

Better babies is the biggest of all big things.

The man who does not love babies hates himself. It has not been long since he himself was a baby.

Keep every dollar for home investment. It will grow more dollars for you and your children and children's children.

Salem is the safest place on earth for your dollars, and they are all needed here, for the building up of our industries and the development of our country, and to provide homes for our people.

Show the Shriners that Salem is the solidest city of its size in the United States, and that it is some size, too, and is bound to grow bigger every day for a generation or more. It's the truth.

The biggest drive of all will be the one to get all the harvests safely gathered.

Work ought to be going on right now on the Salem hospital. Valuable time is being lost.

Former Salem Man Is Given Honor in Portland

H. N. Stoudenmeyer, former Salem man and leader of the Cherrier band, has been particularly honored in being chosen to lead a mass band concert composed of 3500 pieces, which will play at Multnomah field Thursday morning of Shrine week at 10 o'clock.

This band will be made up of all the Shrine bands visiting Portland for the convale and will be one of the largest concerts ever heard in this part of the country.
