PARIS TO FACE PROBLEM OF UPPER SILESIA

Germans and Poles Divided Over Question of Who Should Have Country

MAY BE SPEARATE STATE

Some Natives Wish to Break Away from Prussia and Form Separate State

BERLIN, June 26.—"Paris must take up again the question of autonomy for Upper Silesia," is the assertion one hears from Germans throughout the plebiscite area. It is also made by some Poles, and is the opinion, too, of many disinterested students of the plebiscite situation. Germans and Poles are miles apart, of course, in their views of what kind of independence Upper Silesia should have, but the supporters in both camps of the separatist movement agree that the district will be a trouble zone for years if it is added to Poland or remains German.

The idea of a separate state has long been discussed by Germans who have wished to break away from Prussia and set up an autonomous bundestadt like that of Bavaria and Wurttemberg. This old imperialist government regarded the movement with stern disfavor and it made no appreciable headway until the revolution which overthrew the Kaiser. But it was not until Upper Silesia was made a plebiscite battleground and the Germans woke up to the possibility of the territory being added to Poland that the question of complete autonomy—that is, the establishment of an entirely separate and independent state like Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia—became a live issue.

In dread of Polish annexation the Germans, who contend that Upper Silesia's mines and industries would be ruined under Polish management, are now showing for the separation and making a case that is heard above all the rest of the plebiscite fight.

What this national commission at Opl. is thinking of the separatist movement is a deep secret. Officially the commissioners refuse to discuss the commission's business is to hold an election to enable the Upper Silesians to say whether they want their country to remain German or go to Poland. It is reasonable to assume, however, that if the commission recommended to Paris reconsideration of autonomy that the supreme council, which rejected the proposal last February, would give it another hearing.

The most ardent advocates of separation are members of the German Center party. Catholics who seek religious freedom but are reluctant to secure it at the expense of Upper Silesia becoming Polish.

Neither German labor leaders nor mine operators in Upper Silesia want separation except as a last resort. Both in discussing the subject, term it the lesser of two evils.

Both capital and labor cherish the belief that ultimately, if Upper Silesia goes Polish or becomes a separate state, Germany will reap the benefit. Estimates made as to how long it would take Germany to get Upper Silesia back varied from five to 20 years. As the Germans put it, the orientation of Upper Silesia is bound to be west, not east.

BIG CONTRACTS HELD.

PORTLAND, June 26.—Large contracts for welded dredge pipe for the port of Portland are being filled by the King Brothers' Boiler works in this city. The plant, which has greatly expanded since its organization in 1916, has recently turned its energies to local needs instead of giving the greater attention to shipbuilding equipment.

SHOP IS COMPLETE.

PORTLAND, June 26.—With the installation of new equipment in the St. Johns iron works, Portland now has one of the most complete foundries and machine shops in the northwest. Three new transformers, a two-ton electric furnace and two jarring machines to save hand work in making moulds make up the additional machinery. The plant occupies an entire block and employs as high as 100 men.

MACHINERY MADE

PORTLAND, Or., June 26.—Sheet metal products and machinery are to be the output of the newly organized Union Refining & Metal works. The corporation is capitalized at $100,000.

MRS. HERREN PASSES AWAY

Resident of Salem for Thirty Years Laid to Rest in City View Cemetery

Mrs. Amanda J. Herren, the widow of James R. Herren, died Friday, June 25, at 6:30 a. m. Salem had been Mrs. Herren's home for more than 30 years. Her sister, Miss A. McCulloch, has had her home with Mrs. Herren during this time, and been faithfully by her side during all the months of suffering. Two other sisters, Mrs. John Mount and Mrs. Robert Crabtree, and two brothers, Otis S. McCulloch and George McCulloch survive her. These years have brought many friends to Mrs. Herren, won by her cheery nature and strong Christian character.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the Rigdon chapel. Rev. T. S. Anderson of the First Presbyterian church conducted the services and used as his subject "And there shall be no night there." Miss Margaret Hodge sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," and "Face to Face."

The pallbearers were Paul Wallace, Charles Park, J. N. Skafte, Joseph Albert, A. O. Condit and E. MacGill, the latter of Portland. After short services at the grave the body was laid to rest in City View cemetery.

Take this to Your Lawyer---

Ask him to tell you into what troubles your estate may fall if you, in your peculiar circumstances, should die without a Will. Tell him about your property, your family, and their tendencies. Tell him whether prudence demands that your interests be kept intact and administered as a unit after your death. Have him draw your Will.

And ask him if he does not believe this Bank would make an ideal Executor.
