DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE FOR PRESIDENT

Governor James M. Cox of Ohio, the nominee of the Democratic party for President, was born on a farm near Jacksonburg, Ohio, fifty years ago the 31st day of March...

Governor Cox has been responsible for a budget system in Ohio, which has reformed the finances of that state, and which costs only the salaries of one commissioner and two clerks.

He has been responsible for the whipping into shape of an improved system of permanent road construction, a better school system, and a number of other reforms in his state.

The other side: Mr. Bryan says Governor Cox is wet. How wet he has not said.

Ohio is a very wet state. It has a big German population, especially in its great cities.

Perhaps the wetness of Governor Cox will help him in his campaign, in Ohio. Perhaps not. And it may lose him a lot of other states.

Governor Cox has a divorced wife, and the syndicates show him with a present wife and child. There are intimations that there will be something to explain about the divorce...

It is remarkable that both the Republican and Democratic parties have nominated newspaper men for their standard bearers; and both from Ohio; and located in cities only a few miles apart.

Both have worked up from poor country boys.

Both are popular at home.

Both are successful in business and have seen both defeat and success in politics.

But Mr. Harding represents a party of progress, of achievement; of protection to American labor and capital.

And Mr. Cox represents a party bound to the free trade principles of the Democracy; to negotiation in all things; to the opposite of construction; to reaction and sectionalism.

The people of the United States want a cleaning out of the departments at Washington; they want the kind of men in the cabinet Mr. Harding will call around him; they want a clean slate and a new deal, looking to a period of economy and reconstruction...

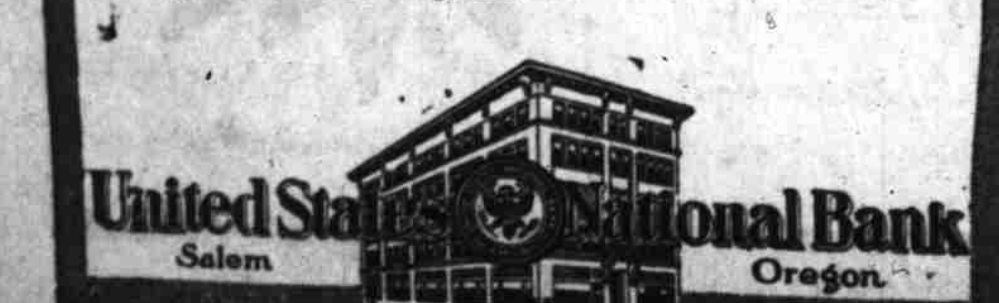

Many people all over this section were surprised yesterday that The Statesman carried the news of the nomination of Cox by the Democrats at San Francisco, while that news was absent from all other morning papers; more especially the Portland papers. This was due to the fact that The Statesman continues to receive Associated Press dispatches for two or three hours after the editions of the Portland papers printed for the Willamette valley points go to press...

Any way, one does not have to consult an oracle or the culla board to confidently predict that the next president of the United States will be an editor.

The downtrodden newspaper men are coming into their own. Harding and Cox are both hardworking newspaper men.

BECOME A SAVER

THE earner prospers permanently only to the degree by which he is able to convert his earnings into savings. Otherwise he is dependent upon the fickle fortunes of the rise and fall of wages or salaries, and must live from one payday to another upon what may be forthcoming.

gray streaks of the dawn yesterday morning. Tell us what you know about cucumbers. There is more to know than many wot of.

The two-thirds rule of the Democrats is un-American. It was made in slavery days to keep the northern Democrats from having any deciding voice in the party's councils.

What has become of the New Jersey governor who was going to make New Jersey as 'wet as the Atlantic'?

Emigrants are now pouring into the country on every steamer. The tide of travel westward has been nominal for several years on account of the war.

What this country needs more than politics is for the people to get their heads out of the cloud and come down to earth. The reign of common sense. There are signs that the Saturnalia is over. Let us hope so.

NAMING THE ORPHAN.

The radicals who will form a new party through the "Committee of Forty-eight"—to meet in convention in Chicago this week—seem to express a preference for the "American party" as the title of their organization. Probably want to call it American because there are so few Americans in it or because they would overturn so many of the established institutions of America.

THE SUBSTITUTES.

It will be necessary to have a board of interpretations and a commission of consulting chemists to assist in enforcing the prohibition amendment. Almost every day the agents of the revenue bureau enter the drug store and affix the tag of infamy to some preparation.

THE "BROWS" AND GUM.

A facetious writer has declared that various phases of gum chewing mark the social and intellectual standing of the chewer. The high-brow regards chewing gum with haughty disdain. The low-brow concedes himself the solace of chewing gum in private.

THE SINS OF THE CITIES.

Dr. John Roach Straton of New York has just published a number of his sermons in book form dealing with the "fires of hell raging in the amusement centers of the cities" where "multitudes of young men and women are being swept away to eternal destruction."

But the implication that the sins of the cities exceed the sins of the countryside is open to question. The lack of amusements and interests in the remote villages does not make for sequestered virtue, and the quiet country towns seem more rife with scandals and immorality, according to the size of their population, than many a big city.

KNEADS THE DOUGH.

A high school boy won first prize in the bread baking contest at a fair in Massachusetts. Many old fashioned mothers as well as a lot of flossy young females who dabbled in domestic science were in the competition, but the youth carried off the blue ribbon. That boy is all right. He realizes that the man of the future will have to be a blamed good cook in order to command the love and confidence of his wife.

GERMANY'S ARMY DEMANDS.

A change has come over the spirit of the German rulers. A little while ago they were painting pictures of black ruin unless the country be allowed to retain an army of 200,000 men. Now it is stated that the delegates to the Spa conference, soon to assemble, will not insist on this number. This may be taken as an indication that Berliners are losing their fear of the Bolsheviks.

The Society for the Study of the Social Consequences of the War, a Copenhagen organization, reports that forty million persons have been lost to the world through the war. Its figures are based upon actual losses in the several countries engaged, upon the decline in the birth rate and the rise in the death rate since 1914.

FORTY MILLION LIVES.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

Now for Pinchot. But he will soon pinch out. No man with a name with only three letters has ever yet been president. This is the Democratic Roosevelt who is running for vice president. There are not many of that kind of that name.
