RAIN CRACKS CHERRIES

Dehydrating Plant Uses Blemished Product if Flavor is Retained

Rains that come during the early part of July are usually considered by farmers as a blessing, but according to the cherry growers of Salem, the present July rains come with evil forebodings. A loss of thousands of dollars among the cherry growers of Willamette valley will be charged directly to the inopportune rains, as carloads of cherries are being rendered unmarketable due to cracking as a result of rain.

The Bings and the Lamberts are the varieties that have suffered by the rain storms. Cracked cherries are unsuitable for commercial purposes. However, they may be used for domestic needs. Many of them are still suited for home canning.

Zenith Reached.

Many of the organizations who are handling cherries have been constrained to refuse the blemished fruit, considering it unmarketable. According to the firms that contracted for the cherries, such as the Oregon Packing company, Hunt Brothers cannery and and Salem King's Products company, no protests have been expressed by the farmers.

The Salem King's Products company has reached its zenith in cherries. For a brief period of time the company will be unable to accept cherries, or to make promises for their disposition. However, members of the firm are making every effort to ameliorate the threatened loss due to rain. Many of the cracked cherries, they say, can be used in their output. As far as this company is concerned the blemished fruit is marketable for the company's purposes as long as the flavor of the fruit is retained.

The Oregon Packing company announces that it is unable to use blemished cherries.

This company had a successful run, having been able to secure sufficient employes for all departments. The company is now working with capacity force.

Crop Is Heavy.

This year's cherry crop, according to those experienced in Willamette valley fruit conditions, surpasses the output of previous seasons. It has been a bumper crop, making it necessary for the cherry dealers to secure additional assistance in handling the fruit. During the past week trucks, automobiles, one-horse wagons, and "sway-backed" Studebakers have formed extended lines at local plants awaiting opportunity to unload cherries. Never in the past, say the warehousemen, have vehicles been forced to form a waiting line because of congestion. If such a condition did arise in the past years, it lasted only a day, and not a week, as was the condition during the past week.

The growers are well pleased with the prevailing prices paid for their products. An average of 13 cents has been paid by the cherry buyers. The cherry price did not fluctuate to an appreciable extent during the season.

Loganberries are only slightly affected by the rains. The rain has made them tender and they bleed when harvested. Thirteen cents is the average price being paid for loganberries.

Royal Annes Safe.

The Phez company, according to officials, sees no advantage in encouraging the market in loganberries at this time. High cost of sugar is the reason. To buy at prevailing prices at this time, they declare, means nothing more than to "rob Paul and pay Peter." If products are bought up at high prices, it means that the consumer will be forced to pay high prices. They take this stand, according to their statement, in the interest of the consumer.

According to M. O. Evans, field manager of the Oregon Growers' Cooperative association, it is impossible to estimate the loss in the cherry crops. This will be determined as soon as the tonnage has been approximately ascertained. He states that Royal Annes will scarcely be affected by the rains. They are a more firm and hardy variety.

WAR HORRORS SEND MAN TO INSANE WARD

Gas and Shrapnel Wounds Lead to Committment of Amos Frisch.

BROTHERS OVERPOWERE

Strapping Youth Becomes Violent When Taken to Resort for Treatment.

Amos Frisch was gassed with mustard gas and received shrapnel wounds on the battlefields of France and as a result became mentally deranged, according to his two brothers who brought him to the city yesterday from Gates. He was committed to the Oregon state hospital for medical attention.

According to one of the brothers, Frisch suffered from msutard gas while with troops engaged in defending a sector in France. Later, says the brother, he received shrapnel wounds about the head. At the end of the war he was invalided home.

For 11 months Frisch was held in the City and County hospital of St. Paul. He received the best of medical attention in that institution until about two months ago when he returned to the home of his parents near Mill City, Ore. While home, his brothers say, he manifestly recuperated and gained several pounds in weight. About a week ago he was taken by his two brothers to the Breitenbush hot springs.

For days ago at the huot springs Frisch was seized with convulsions, which frequently attack soldiers who have been gassed. The convulsive attacks persisted for 12 1-2 hours until they culminated apparently in the loss of rationality. His condition caused violent resistance to the efforts of his brother to calm him. He soon became unmanageble, almost superhuman in strength, frequently overpowering his brothers.

It was necessary for the brothers to strap his legs and arms so he could be brought within reach of medical assistance. Even then, they say, it required effort to prevent him from injuring himself.

They placed him on a stretcher and in this manner carried the sick man 12 miles, walking all the way to Gates. From there he was taken to Stayton where he received his first medical treatment. His case was diagnosed as peculiar and a probable result of wounds. He was brought to Salem yesterday.

The brothers expressed a desire to enlist the aid of the local Red Cross organization, but when informed that this would be impracticable and the local hospitals were unprepared to care for patients mentally deranged, they hesitantly consented to have their brother committed to the state hospital for treatment.

One of the brothers said they had not had a minute of sleep for four days.

Amos Frisch showed no violence when examined yesterday but repeated over and over:

"I was all right until that last shot. That last shot put me on the blink."

Apparently Frisch is the victim of war horrors.

"I want my brother to have a good chance for recovery," said one of the Frisch boys with emotion after he had signed the committment papers."

MUSIC HEARD AT AUTO PARK

Wooded Environs Prove Advantageous to Players and to Soloist.

Jupiter Pluvius was administered a knockout blow in the solar plexus last night by Oscar Steelhammer and his company of musicians when intermittent rains throughout the day and black threatening clouds in the evening failed to deter the bandmaster from stopping his concert scheduled for the city camping grounds.

As scheduled the concert was held in the automobile park and a large crowd was present to hear the program. Under the able supervision of Officer W. L. Bryant, a large number of cars were parked in an orderly manner within the grounds. Every car within the park faced the improvised band stand, conserving all the space possible.

The program was opened by the flag raising ceremonies of the Boy Scouts of Salem. A company of 25 boys took part in raising the flag on the new flag pole in the park. They were assisted by the audience when the national anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung. Following this was the flag salute at attention by the 25 Boy Scouts as Old Glory ascended to the top of the pole where it waved triumphantly during the concert.

The vocal solo of Mrs. Hallie Parrish Durdall was given in a manner that elicited several encores to which she responded graciously. Her solo was "Suwanee River." The sylvan back ground, the tall trees that encompass the grounds, revealed unexpected accoustic properties and the singer's voice was easily heard throughout the grounds. The audience expressed its approval by a tremendous applause with car horns and hand-clappings, to which she responded by repeating the last verse of her solo three times.

The band music was heard to advantage. Due to the background of trees the music had a penetrating power not found at Willson park. All parts of the band could be heard distinctly, all blending in a harmonious melody.

The following were registered at the camping grounds last night:

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Cowan, Fresno, Cal.; Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Hendrickson, Fresno.; Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Cowan, Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Gaines, Seattle; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Caw, Seattle; C. R. STORM IN LEWISTON.

LEWISTON, Idaho, July 13.—A heavy electrical storm visited the Lewiston country early this evening, causing cloudbursts. The Lewiston power service was out of commission for an hour and a half, due to trouble at the Asotin Creek power plant.

Lightning struck at two points on the Lewiston-Riparia branch of the Camas Prairie Railway company and the outgoing evening train is stalled behind slides due to rushes of water from the hillsides. Railroad wires on the line are down.

There are reports of loss of life in the Pullman and Moscow district to the north, but unverified.

There is no telephone service out of Lewiston further north than Genesee.

Underwood Talks to Rainbow Division

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 13.—Declaring that "the government has become the football of the partisan and the desire of the plunderer" United States Senator Underwood in an address today at the re-union of the Rainbow division, pleaded with the world war veterans to become leaders in the fight against dangers which he said are threatening the life of the republic.

"We are standing in the dawn of a new era of our republic," Senator Underwood declared. "The tremendous force of new ideas and new conditions must be met and solved. Apparently no plan remains steadfast and no policy is approved.

"Business is uncertain in the grip of heavy taxation and our commerce halts under the limitation of transportation. The war profiteer glories in his new wealth and the high cost of living threatens the humble home. The rule of even-handed justice is endangered and legislation for special class is the demand of the hour. Anarchy threatens to strike down the law and the will of the mobs defies the peace of the land.

"Men of the Rainbow division, you who served and sacrificed on the field of battle as volunteers at your country's call, are you really mustered out of your country's service, or have you been furloughed to serve and sacrifice again as citizens of the republic for the honor of our country, the glory of our flag and the safety of our common heritage?"

Fifty Former Gobs Leave Today for Summer Cruise

PORTLAND, July 13.—The first detachment of naval reserves of Oregon who have signed up for the summer cruise will leave Portland for Bremerton tomorrow on the destroyer Talbot. Between 40 and 50 former "gobs" are expected to go in the detachment.

At Bremerton the Oregon reserves are to be distributed among several destroyers as there are not enough from this state to form an entire crew for one ship. All the destroyers are to visit ports up and down the coast, and most of the men will remain aboard ship from two to four weeks.

GRAIN DEALERS MEET.

PORTLAND, July 13.—The Pacific Northwestern Grain Dealers' association held its annual meeting here today with members present from all parts of Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

S. C. Armstrong of Seattle was re-elected president and I. C. Sanford of Portland was re-elected vice president. H. N. Stockett of Great Falls, Mont., secretary of the Northwestern Grain Dealers' association, was chosen manager and secretary of the association.

OFFICER VICTOR CLEVER SLEUTH

Sherlock Holmes Has Nothing on Salem Policeman Who Nabs Picnicker.

In Officer O. F. Victor, Salem has a policeman equipped with eagle eyes, or perhaps it is more appropriate to say nighthawk eyes, considering his arrest of Frank Decius for chicken stealing.

It was a clever piece of sleuthing that puts to shame the storied feats of Sherlock Holmes. That paragon of detectives must retire and take a back seat. The arrest by Officer Victor of the chicken thief places him in the spot-light.

Saturday night about 10 o'clock while patrolling his beat Officer Victor glimpsed a fire in Bush's pasture. At first thought he attributed the blaze to some picnickers—you know, those evenings picnickers with only two in the party. As a police officer he considered it his duty to satisfy hi conjecture, o he tarted to invetigate.

He approached the fire stealthily, concealing himself as best he could behind trees, but when he neared the blaze he says he noticed something white. He passed it up as a girl seated on the turf. While the officer was still behind a tree, the male member of the party, as he thought, started in his direction.

The officer confronted the stranger and queried:

"What are you doing here this time of the night?"

"I am camping here for the night" was the ready reply of the stranger, who later said he was Frank Decius.

The other member of the party darted into the thicket, despite the command "halt!" He was a man.

The white color the police officer had seen from a distance was the feathers of a white chicken, and the second member of the party was removing them.

Decius did not camp in Bush's pasture that night. Instead, he became a guest of Officer Victor at the city jail. Next day he was turned over to the sheriff and lodged in the county jail. His case will be heard in the near future before Judge Unruh.

Saving Is a Habit

ONE acquires the desire and ability to save money. The first natural inclination of most everybody is to indulge himself in everything he wants.

But it is easy to see the pitfalls that lie in the path of that policy.

Perhaps the most striking feature of a United States National Bank SAVINGS ACCOUNT is the influence and encouragement it affords the depositor.
