Bits for Breakfast

Marion county census, 47,117. Increase, 7337, or 15.4 per cent. That is a good showing, compared with most other Oregon counties.

But it should be larger in the next decennium, because Salem's increase was 25.4 per cent, and the country should grow as fast as the city, to make a symmetrical growth.

The increases in population in Salem and in the surrounding country will depend upon one another, largely. Salem cannot grow fast and hold it without a fast growth of the farming districts, and the growth of population on the farms will depend largely upon the marketing and manufacturing facilities which Salem must provide.

You will read the copyrighted article on the editorial page, headed "The World's Present Need," and you will want to continue reading the article of this brilliant San Jose writer, from Sunday to Sunday. You may not always agree with him, but he will give you something interesting, and something to think about.

The pull all together to get all the flax pulled must go on for two or three weeks. The proper harvesting of that crop holds great promise for the future of Salem.

That gink, Parley F. Christensen, who is running for president on the third, or fourth, or fifth party ticket seems to think he is having a good time, any way. There is an old fellow out at the Salem insane asylum who has a lot of fun out of thinking he is president of the United States. Who would begrudge such fellows their enjoyment?

No news is good news—from Mexico. Why not have a "be-kind-to-wife" week? The Greeks are at the gates of Adrianople—again.

What a lot of us need more than anything else is a few days off for fishing. How are the June brides getting on with their house-cleaning?
