CAUGHT!

some stress to the glories of truth.

He mentioned that it had been charged against him that he clung to old standards, and he admitted in a measure the fact.

He drank of the past for the refreshment of the present and the inspiration of the future.

He said that if he could call for but one national distinction it would be that ours might be known as an honest people.

We need the stamp of common, everyday honesty everywhere.

Continuing on this thought, he added: "If the governments and their diplomats in Europe had been honest there would have been no war. If everybody concerned had been rigidly honest, peace might have followed the armistice within ninety days. If we could only be genuinely honest with one another we would put an instant end to industrial and social unrest, and if we were only honest with God we would again become a moral and religious people."

The country would indeed be safe were power and authority entrusted to this man who not only prays to the living God to make his people honest but works with his own living arm and mind to stimulate them to that end.

the Crimea and taking in all of the southern part of the old empire. Russia needs a man of the stamp of Abraham Lincoln. If Baron Wrangle is that sort of a man, Russia will speedily recover from the insanity and criminality from which she has been suffering, under the bloody and lustful and dishonest misrule of the Lenin and Trotzky bunch of human hyenas.

"Every man should be a law unto himself." Who says that? As a rule, the purely selfish individual. The phrase sounds pretty—but it's dangerous as the glittering eyes of a poisonous serpent. Each one a law unto himself? Yes, perhaps, when the motive of each is the welfare of all. Meantime, let's be grateful for representative government.

Early estimates from the census bureau are said to place the total rural population of the country at not more than 48 or 49 per cent of the whole. The drift of population to the cities is the outstanding feature of 10 years. The shade of Jefferson, looking at the growing urban population and the growing unrest, will perhaps permit itself an ironical, though kindly, smile. For it was Jefferson's belief that contentment was possible only if the inhabitants of a nation lived in the country and owned land. Jefferson hardly allowed in his thought for the "industrial revolution," as economists and historians call it, and he was not fond of cities. But time may yet prove that his view of this matter, as of so many others, was philosophically sound.

NATURAL HONESTY.
Honesty is the best policy. Even some tricky minds admit the fact, but there are an awful lot of people to whom evasion and double dealing have become a part of life.

On Friday, the 13th, Senator Harding was lucky enough to be addressing the convention of Ohio Republican editors.

Being himself a practical newspaper man and aware of the perils which beset the path, he gave

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

Good morning.

The Statesman is putting on some metropolitan airs; commencing this morning with eight columns to the page, and adding a little to the length of the columns.

Fire was started in the big boiler at the Salem paper mill on Tuesday, and also the following day, for a try-out.

The machinery will probably be limbered up about the first of September on a few rolls of news print. The Statesman hopes to print its Salem slogan issue on the paper mill on the first roll of news print manufactured by the new mill.

Lausane hall, the girls' dormitory at Willamette university, is receiving some finishing touches.

And it will be a building of which Salem and all the friends of the old school will be justly proud. It will be the very last word in dormitories. Not a thing in the way of modern conveniences is being overlooked.

It is expected that the upper rooms and the refectory in the basement will be ready for use at the opening of school, September 15th, and that the whole structure will be finished soon thereafter. It is said that every room in the building will be occupied—and that will mean a great deal to Willamette university and to Salem.

SALEM HAS COMPANY.
Salem is not the only city wrestling with the housing problem.

Nearly all are.

There is a shortage of 2,000-3,000 houses in the United States. The shortage extends all over the world.

The following is from the Springfield Republican:

"It would seem too late to provide adequate housing for New York's roofless population by next winter. The city is short about 100,000 apartments. But with more money going into the building of new theaters than into new dwellings, private enterprise has broken down in solving the housing problem. This fact forces Governor Smith to summon the legislature in special session on September 20, to consider emergency housing legislation. The session ought to be called for an immediate date if the best use is to be made of the time left before the temperature drops to freezing. Probably the credit of the municipalities will now have to be utilized on a large scale if anything worth while is to be done in providing shelter for the surplus population."

One thing, our Oregon winter climate is not as severe as New York's; and people can live in tents in Salem, even in the winter time, without freezing to death.

Audit at Jacksonville Is Not Yet Completed

An audit of the accounts of the Jacksonville State bank, recently closed by an order of Will H. Bennett, state superintendent of banks, has not yet been completed, according to Mr. Bennett, who returned here yesterday after a week at Jacksonville. He will return to Jacksonville Sunday to complete the audit. Meanwhile, Marshall Hooper, one of the state bank examiners is in charge.

Back in New York the bankers are agitating for the dollar bank cut. But that is not such a high figure for getting trimmed in New York.

Exclusive Ideas in the New Dress Goods

Those who read the sign of nature tell us that an early Fall is indicated. This is a fair warning to start early sewing on Fall dresses. Among the first arrivals are, fabrics from the leading mills and importers, where they are now being shown and where they are attracting a great deal of attention. Come and view them, we here extend to you a cordial invitation to do so.
