How to Beautify a Summer Soiled Face

It's really a simple matter to renovate a face soiled by sun, winds or dirt. Ordinary mercerized wax, used like cold cream, will transform the worst old complexion into one of snowy whiteness and velvet softness. It literally peels off the outer veil of surface skin, but so gently, gradually, there's no discomfort. The without skin comes off, not in patches, but evenly, in tiny particles, leaving no evidence of the treatment. The younger, healthier under-skin forming the new complexion, is one of captivating loveliness. One ounce of mercerized wax, to be had at any drug store, is enough to remove any tanned, reddened, pimpled, freckled or blotchy skin, simply before retiring, washing it off mornings.

Many skin wrinkles easily with every wind that blows, with heat, sun, etc. An excellent wrinkle remover, because it tightens the skin and strengthens relaxed muscles, is a wash made as follows: Powdered salicylic acid, one ounce, dissolved in witch hazel, one-half pint. This gives immediate results.

Have you weighed and measured your child? If your child does not meet the required weights and measurements of the following table it is not normal and should be taken to the August clinic. There's a reason for every abnormal condition.

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

The Story of a Honeymoon

A Wonderful Romance of Married Life Wonderfully Told by ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 677

HOW DICKY TOOK MADGE'S STORY OF MRS. HADLEY'S VISIT.

Sometimes a painful scratch or a sudden small bruise will make one forget the pain of a deeper, greater injury. It was so with me after Mrs. Hadley had taken her correct, impeccable way down our front walk and into her waiting motor.

My encounter with her, insignificant though it had been, had irritated me to a point where I forgot temporarily the very real estrangement between Dicky and me. I found myself waiting impatiently for him to come home that I might tell him of the incident. I wonder if all wives feel as I do about sharing my experiences with their husbands? More than half the pleasure of a new book, a play or an outing is gone if Dicky isn't with me. And I'm never comfortable when any odd happening breaks up the day until I have shared it with my husband and have received his sympathy or sympathy as the case may demand.

That is the one great drawback to my secret work, the fact that I cannot tell my husband about it. But since I have been at home again have tried to put one of my mind altogether that phase of it. Thinking of it always brings up speculation as to the reasons why Lillian insists that Dicky be barred from all knowledge of my work, and that avenue of thought is a darg, puzzling thoroughfare for me.

The Home Coming.

Dicky was late coming home from Mineola, where he was engaged in making the illustrations for an aviation serial, a commission he had recently received. He greeted me with the almost formal courtesy which had pervaded his manner ever since our stormy interview by the brook, but I noticed something about him, an air of suppressed excitement, as if something momentous had happened to him.

I knew better, however, than to ask him any questions. His moods are variable, lately, and I have learned to be wary of them. So I simply answered his "Hello, Madge"—which he managed to invest with as much formality as if his actual words had been "Good evening, Mrs. Graham"—with a careless, friendly "Hello, Dicky," and added as he mounted the stairs to his room:

"Dinner will be ready in 20 minutes on the veranda."

There's a large, square veranda at the rear of the library in the old house we have bought, which we had secured as soon as the first hint of spring came. It overlooks the garden, at the foot of which is the little lake bordered by trees, the most attractive feature of our grounds.

Both Dicky and I delight in having our meals served on the veranda, on the breezy mornings and evenings have been a bit too chilly for comfort heretofore. The afternoon had been especially warm, however, and when I instructed Katie to serve dinner on the breeze-swept veranda, I was sure Dicky's pleasure after his journey from Mineola would equal my own.

Careless Shampooing Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified coconut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonful of Mulsified will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified coconut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

match my voice to his spirit of railery.

"I'm to infer then that my kinswoman won't shed the light of her countenance upon us at meal time when we eat out here?"

"You're eminently correct," I answered. "I hope you'll be able to hear up when I tell you that I have instructed Katie to serve all our meals out here."

"Praise be to Allah!" he ejaculated devoutly, and then with a return to his old delightful manner, "Well, what's been doing today?"

I try never to bore Dicky by relating the petty details with which so many women garnish the meals of their husbands. But he has a keen sense of the ridiculous, and often there are incidents of the day's routine, especially of Katie's furnishing, which afford him a hoarse laugh. Fortunately Katie had been in especially good form, and he appeared highly amused. Then I related at length my experience with the snobbish Mrs. Hadley. But as I talked I felt indefinitely as if the curtain which had separated us for so many days was again slowly descending between us.

There was neither sympathy nor amusement in my husband's face as he listened. But there was another expression which stung me. (To be continued)
