"Daddy" Eyre Proud of Work With Pig Clubs—George W. Eyre, as every one knows, has been the "daddy" of the United States National Bank Pig club; has acted in that capacity for several years. He is feeling especially good over the successes of the exhibits of this now famous pig club at the state fair. Swift & Co. bought the first prize pig of this club at 21 cents a pound—6 cents above the market price; and the second prize pig at 20 cents; third at 19, and fourth at 18. Swift & Co. also paid Portland prices for all the other fat hogs on the fair grounds; took them on the grounds, weighed them there, and paid all expenses of shipment; which, by the way, this company has been doing each year. Then Swift & Company made "Daddy" Eyre a present of $10, which is the first money he has ever received for his work in connection with the pig club. But he has had barrels of fun, and the great satisfaction of having been instrumental in starting several hundred boys and girls on the way towards self-supporting and self-respecting and profitable undertakings, in which they will add to the general wealth and upbuilding of the whole section and country, as well as receiving vast benefits themselves from the efforts thus directed into channels of useful industry and development.

Paroled Convict Cannot be Extradited to Oakland—J. S. Riley, paroled sometime ago from the Oregon state penitentiary, cannot be extradited from Portland to Oakland, where he is charged with a felony, according to a legal opinion given by L. H. VanWinkle, assistant attorney general, yesterday. Correspondence received at the attorney general's office indicates that after being paroled from prison Riley went to Portland where his wife is said to be ill in a hospital. While there the Portland officers received a telegram from the police at Oakland ordering his arrest on a warrant issued at the latter city. Riley was afterward arrested, but when the police discovered that he was a paroled convict from the Oregon prison he was released. Riley is still under parole, according to the assistant attorney general, and consequently is under the jurisdiction of the Oregon officials. Because of that fact he cannot be lawfully extradited to another state. The opinion was requested by Percy M. Varney, state parole officer.

Swift Company Purchases Boys' and Girls' Swine—Swift & Co. with a branch house in Portland, sent a representative to Salem yesterday and purchased all the prize pigs entered in competition by the boys' and girls' pig clubs at the recent state fair. For these animals the purchaser paid a price somewhat in excess of the market quotations. Local meat dealers had been urged to encourage the boys and girls in pig raising by buying young
