St. Louis Car Company

Has Conflagration

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 12.—The plant of the St. Louis Car company, occupying 16 acres in the northern edge of the city is threatened by fire of undetermined origin, which broke out at 12:15 o'clock this morning.

The fire started in the building occupied by the milling department and was quickly communicated to adjoining structures. Firemen were handicapped in their efforts to combat the blaze by an inadequate water supply. Police estimated the minimum damage at $600,000.

From the milling department the fire swept on to the lumber yard, where a large amount of material was stored, then gradually worked its way to other buildings.

The society editor of The Statesman has a phone all her own now; it is 106. The good women of Salem are welcome to the use of that phone exclusively; and they will be neither interfering nor interfered with.

The automobile lines running between Salem and Portland are getting a lot of passenger business away from the railroads. If Jim Hill and Harriman were alive, there would be a beautiful exhibition of price cutting on fares.

How are the legislators and all the lady and other clerks, and the members of the third house going to find places to stay during the legislative session next winter, with Salem already full and overflowing?

They are wondering in Washington who Tom Marshall is going to vote for.

There is a good lady back in Indiana who will be 100 years old on November 2, and she is going to cast her first vote for Harding. She has not lived a hundred years for nothing.

Election two weeks from today. Then this country will vote for a complete change at Washington and for the ushering in of the greatest period of prosperity this country has ever known.
