Bitter Gridiron Rivals to Meet on Chemawa Field This Afternoon

The Willamette Bearcats have gone on the warpath and they expect completely to annihilate the Chemawa tribe when they meet in a gridiron clash this afternoon on the Chemawa field.

Chemawa has been trying to get Willamette's scalp for several years and since the red men have drawn the game for their own field they feel sure of taking the piekin honors from the pale face Methodists.

Last year they were defeated by the Bearcats by a 24 to 0 score. Both teams are said to be in excellent shape and in much better form than last year.

Big Crowd Certain.
This football contest will be the big feature in Chemawa's home-coming celebration. A big crowd is expected and there will be some real pep shown when the Indians meet Willamette in the first game of the season.

The Willamette aggregation is in perfect shape and expects to score several times on the Indians. Loren Basler, star center, broke on of his fingers in scrimmage practice and will probably be out of the game today. Bain, who played at the pivot position in two of last year's games, will probably line up at center.

Straight Play, the Order.
Because of the superabundance of rain and a muddy field, it is expected that straight football will be resorted to during today's game. Mathews has been drilling his men hard during the last week in close formation and line plays.

In Chemawa's lineup several veterans of last season will appear in Colby, Downey, Johnson, Nuckles and Spearson. Edger and Sampson, two new men, will appear in the line-up, taking the places of Nix and Choates, last year's stars, who have gone to eastern schools.

Senator Warren G. Harding, presidential candidate of the Republican party, in the exhibition hall at the Minnesota State Fair at Minneapolis. The senator is shown standing beside two prize winning Holsteins.

On September 8 Senator Harding delivered his speech on "Agriculture" at this fair, pledging the Republican party to aid the farmers of the country. In brief he promised:

1. Better representation for the farmer in larger governmental affairs.
2. Encouragement of cooperative movements among farmers to lessen the cost of marketing.
3. Scientific study of farm prices and production costs, with a view to stabilizing prices and making them truly reflect the cost of production.
4. No more "unnecessary price fixing of farm products" and "if considered efforts" to reduce farm prices arbitrarily.
5. Better rural credits to enable buying of small farms and obtaining necessary working capital for diversified farming.
6. Restoration of efficient transportation service and lowest possible rates.
7. Revision of the tariff to give farmers the same protection against cheap foreign production as is afforded other industries.

Senator Harding's speech was most enthusiastically received by the thousands of people who heard it.

the Democratic book of destruction."

"Sensible men and women will wonder," he continued, "at the assumption of those who, having no practical program to offer at home, no constructive proposal to make for America, should be going the length and breadth of the land proposing that the league of nations be adopted. A Democratic president, even if he were elected, would not be able to bind the American people or mortgage their consciences and their honor under article 10 for the simple reason that he could not summon sufficient votes in congress to support his program. His attempt would result in another stalmat, and an unwilling America would find herself just where she has been since the bungled negotiations at Paris."

Cox League Impossible

"The reason a Democratic president could do nothing toward putting into effect our membership in the league of nations, just as it stands, is that, behind the representatives at Washington, the American people have rejected membership of that kind. They rejected it long ago; they will continue their refusal to enter the Paris league as it stands. The proposal of our opponents that the American people shall accept it as it stands, without changes, is an additional affront and the American people are justified in asking, 'How many times must we say no?'"

"When elected I will immediately summon the best minds of America to consult and advise as to America's relationship to the present association of nations, to modify it, or to substitute for it. I am committed to a policy of America doing everything she can, acting either independently or with other nations to prevent future wars. I place only two qualifications upon her contribution. First, her contribution shall actually be something to prevent war. Second, America must retain the right to exercise her own conscience."

In his attack on article 10, Mr. Harding repeated President Wilson's declaration that the article contains "an absolutely compelling moral obligation" and continued:

"I will not be deceived by the argument that we could agree to the Paris league and then creep out of our bargain to send our boys to Europe at the call of a puppet-government. Such a proposal ranks among the most contemptible ever presented to an honest people."

Tomlinson hall was packed for the night meeting. The cheering lasted nearly five minutes.

As the candidate began speaking a man in the gallery shouted "Hurrah for Cox," and a chorus of protests in which many demanded that the interrupter be thrown out, was quieted by the nominee.

"No, don't throw him out," said Mr. Harding. "This isn't a campaign of throwing anybody out. This is a campaign to appeal to reason. The only people were going to throw out is the administration at Washington."

"The incident, however, recalls to my mind that I liked the front porch idea of campaign as originated in Indiana by one of the great statesmen of his time, Benjamin Harrison. In our America there ought to be respect for the aspirations if not for the person of a candidate for president. There ought to be respect for the office if not for the candidate. And every untoward incident leads to misrepresentation."

He also assailed the administration for failure to prepare for the world war, saying he had been told that replacements had been fed into the fighting lines in France without having been taught to fire a gun.

"That's a betrayal of America's manhood," he declared. "That's a sacrifice of the sons of the republic. I hope the time will never come again when we shall sacrifice the manhood and safety of the republic to the winning of a national election for anyone."

Commenting on the statement issued in New York yesterday by 31 leading advocates of a world peace, Senator Harding said in a speech at Seymour that the developments emphasized the correctness of the Republican position.

Things Party Stands For

"The league covenant as negotiated and insisted upon by the president and accepted, approved and defended by the Democratic candidate is impossible. We will not have it. The extreme menace in it is now recognized by the leading advocates of world peace in America. When we have completed the solemn referendum we shall continue to harmonize American sentiment so that we may all support a becoming program.

"It will be a program for a cheaper government. It will be no program to rule the world by force. It will involve no surrender of American sovereignty. It will not merge our internationality. It will leave America free and independent.

"These are the things for which our party stands."

The Safest Investment in the World

We can conceive of no calamity great and devastating enough to wipe out the wealth invested in farm lands unless, at the same time, it swept all life from this planet. While man is so constituted that he must eat, farm lands will remain the safest investment—because they are necessary to his life.

There is no other investment so intrinsically safe as Farm Mortgages. Great industrial firms rise and fall in accordance with the necessity of the service they render. The value of the service rendered by the farm can never decline, for man must always have food—and farms produce it.

Insurance Companies, Trustees and Savings Banks are the heaviest investors in Farm Mortgage securities because they are institutions which cannot afford to lose and their financial experience has taught them by putting their money in the great basic investment—the Farm Mortgage—that they will not lose.

We negotiate farm mortgage loans. If you have idle funds we invite you to call on us.
