

EVENTS OF WEEK ARE MANY AND OF VARIED NATURE

By Molly Brunk

"Autumn in Oregon— A blur of blue and rain

Across the old Willamette." —Mary Carolyn Davies.

"Autumn in Oregon."— Far-spreading landscape dipped in dye, no magical that it bewilders; mist-clad mountains and a light azure haze in the sky; every forest a sunset, and every tree a burning bush—that is autumn in Oregon.

And its coming is very subtle. Some night one goes to bed with the world a gem of green and blue—jade and emerald—to awaken and gaze upon a world that is scarlet and russet and yellow! One cannot account for it all if one is apt to be practical, and demand the why and the wherefore of things, but if one believes in fairies—well then one may think as one likes.

It is no wonder that every affair of a social nature lately has had a setting of "flowers and foliage in autumn coloring!" And the social calendar for the week shows a number of unusually interesting events. There were dinners, and luncheons, and teas, and little informal gatherings, the large bridge party of Mr. and Mrs. David Eyre's Friday night, standing out conspicuously as one of the smartest functions of the year.

With the approach of Halloween, other bright spots will appear on the social horizon, and from then on to Christmas, there will be a full programme for society.

THE turn of the wheel has brought us around again to certain fashions in home-making which smack of the days of our great-grandparents. If you are building and furnishing a strictly up-to-date residence, you are omitting a lot of things that a while ago was thought necessary.

Take a motor drive around the Capital city, view only the new homes, and you will see this note of simplicity, and this simplicity does not mean barrenness, plainness or crudeness. Intelligent simplicity is really an acme of artistic accomplishment.

The present much-talked about housing problem, like every other evil, is productive of some good, inasmuch as it revives our interest in home-making, and individual delight in home construction. We are beginning to study our landscapes, our history, and our traditions for inspiration, and are building accordingly.

Architecture of the past has been fearful of being too plain, just as folk have been fearful of having their lives too simple. It was not realized that increased decoration did not always make for more beauty; that the purpose of art was to express something very fundamental and splendid in nature, not to adorn human beings.

Much of the spirit of today has always been a part of the English architecture: there homes are built to give happiness, to be the place in which people shall be contented,—a place for wholesome existence.

ALL these ultra-modern touches are to be found in the beautiful house that the Frank S. Bartons have built at North Capitol and D streets. Here is a building of sturdy charm, stamped because of its simplicity with a certain rare distinction that one does not meet in every bungalow. It is quaint but not eccentric; unique but not affected; fashioned with frank intention of material comfort, yet imbued with an atmosphere that is far from materialistic.

This new home-building spirit, with its yearning for comfort, simplicity and beauty, for sincere and earnest craftsmanship is exemplified in the recently completed homes of the Dan Fry Jr.'s and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Walsh, that adjoin on South High street. One cannot pass these places without feeling an echo of the home ideals and the enthusiasm that must have gone into their conception and making. For the exteriors with their plain, light-reflecting walls, their casement windows, suggest unpretentious comfort and artistic restraint.

And if you love a "little house" and who doesn't?—there is for your admiration the quaintly charming new home of R. F. Dillon, Eighteenth and Center streets. With all the art that has been woven into this bungalow, there is no displacing self-consciousness, no straining after the unusual or the extreme. Whatever is unique or surprising seems rather the result of spontaneous enthusiasm and natural feeling for picturesque, ready sympathy with the materials, eagerness to make even the commonest detail a thing of loveliness.

A house of unusually interesting design is that of Fred Barker, Market and Cottage streets, and there are pleasing silhouettes in the new home of Adolph Gueffroy, on D street, near Capitol; Alvro S. Hurney on South Church street, and that of H. G. Carl, on E street, near Summer.

All hold a promise of vine-clad loveliness later, for the houses, one must remember, are all very new, and the gardens have not yet had time to soften with foliage, grass and blossom, that boundary line between art and nature.

SOCIETY'S interest this week and next centers around the trio of affairs, which Mr. and Mrs. David W. Eyre are contributing for the pleasure of their friends. The first of the series, a bridge party Friday night, was easily the most distinctive affair of the week, and one of the most charming of the year, setting a splendid precedent for other similar events on the winter's calendar.

MRS. GEORGE A. WHITE, wife of Adjutant-General White, who with her husband, recently came to Salem to reside. They are occupying the house on Bellview street, which was formerly the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Todd. Mrs. White is a charming acquisition to Capital City society.

Monday and Tuesday night will witness the largest dancing parties of the early season, when the Eyres will transform their lovely Oak street residence into a big ballroom, employing the season's most beautiful blossoms for a decorative background. The upper floor will be converted into a big lounge room, where those who do not dance may retire for a game of cards. Seventy invitations have been issued for the first night, thirty-five couple to participate the second evening.

Friday night's bridge was marked by the beauty of the decorations, autumn being suggested in every detail.

Card tables were arranged amid a bower of lovely flowers—zinnias, marigolds, gladioli, and foliage, varying in tone from deepest russet to palest yellow. Tall brass jardinières filled with blossoms in harmonizing color, and gay clusters of floral color in art baskets and bowls, perfected the decorative detail.

Eight tables were circled by the players, the final result of the games, giving the trophies to Mrs. Rollin K. Page and T. B. Kay.

Assisting on this first evening were Mrs. T. C. Smith, Jr., and Mrs. Harry Hawkins.

Local and Portland society is all a-flutter over the announcement in Portland yesterday of the engagement of Miss Alice Dabney and Kenneth Moores, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Moores of Salem. Because of the prominence of the two families, interest in the marriage, which will be an event of the spring, is statewide.

The betrothal was told at a smart tea given by Mrs. Albert Berni in Portland Saturday at which Mrs. Allan Bynon (Florence Hofer), a childhood friend of Miss Dabney, assisted.

Miss Dabney is a very pretty and charming girl, who has been a frequent visitor in Salem, as the guest of Mrs. Bynon.

She is a graduate of St. Helens hall and also of Miss McClintock's finishing school in Boston. Mr. Moores attended the University of Oregon and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity, and during the war he served as a lieutenant in the air service.

The color scheme for the tea was yellow, marigolds and zinnias being used in the centerpiece, and yellow chrysanthemums about the rooms. The attractive tea table was in charge of Mrs. Gertrude Swigert, Mrs. Harold Dekum Gill, Mrs. Addison Knapp and Mrs. Alan Bynon of Salem. Assisting them were Mrs. Harold Sanford, Mrs. John Honey, Mrs. Virginia Thompson, Miss Miriam Hilton and Miss Martha Hoyt.

With subscriptions pouring in from every side, the success of the trio of concerts, to be put on during the winter, under the direction of the Salem Musical bureau, is assured. At the very outset local and out-of-town music lovers have demonstrated their interest in the events, which will bring to Salem for the first time, Harold Henry, pianist; Kathleen Parlow, violinist, and Matzenauer, contralto.

Mail orders have been coming in from adjacent territory, and nearby towns, both from individuals and organizations. Several music clubs will pledge subscriptions attending in a body, and several groups of musicians will assist in the sale of tickets. Belonging to both classifications is the Cecilia club, of young girls, who will occupy boxes on the night of the first concert.

Mr. Henry is to be the first artist to appear, being presented at the Grand theater Friday, November 12. When Mr. Henry gave a concert in Portland, James McQueen, of the Oregonian, had the following to say of him:

"Mr. Harold Henry, the pianist, won much success last night in the Helig theater when he appeared in a concert that was remarkable for his quiet, non-sensational but brilliant playing. Mr. Henry's audience of last night could not have been more cordial and enthusiastic in recognizing his musical genius. He has fully earned the right to be called a master-pianist. His concepts of the Bach, Brahms and Schubert selections were marked by fine, satisfying pianism, with sure, velvety touch and cultured phrasing. Mr. Henry's own 'Dancing Marionette' is a creation of sunny beauty and joy, and it, too, had to be repeated."

Invitations will be issued the first of the week for the large dancing party to be given October 23, at the Illabe Country club, for which local society folk are making plans with the happiest anticipations. The affair will usher in a round of Halloween events, and will officially mark the beginning of the formal social season.

The tea given by Mrs. C. P. Bishop, and Mrs. E. A. Elliott, Thursday afternoon, at the residence of the former, which marked the initial activity of the year for the Thursday Afternoon club, was a beautiful event, assembling a large representation of club members and four additional guests, Mrs. J. J. Murphy, of Portland, house-guest of Mrs. William P. Lord; Mrs. A. S. Brassfield of Illabe, Cal.; house-guest of her sister, Mrs. George J. Pearce, Mrs. Lord and Mrs. W. H. Dolman.

The rooms were charmingly decorated with autumn garden flowers and late roses, marigolds and ferns combining. A large basket of marigolds was employed as a table centerpiece in the dining room, where Mrs. Alice

H. Dodd, and Mrs. Murphy presided over the samovars, Mrs. R. B. Fleming and Mrs. Henry J. Bean assisting in serving.

Mrs. George J. Pearce was honored with the presidency of the club during the coming year (the place occupied by Mrs. Dodd last year). Club dates will be every second Thursday.

Chauncey Bishop of Pendleton was a brief visitor in Salem during the week, spending Thursday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Bishop.

Members of the Bridge-Luncheon club met informally Monday at the residence of Mrs. Henry W. Meyers, for the distribution of last year's card awards, high score honors falling to Mrs. T. A. Livesley. Members, according to their custom, drew for the additional prizes.

Four new members were admitted to the club, Mrs. George F. Rodgers, Mrs. David Eyre, Mrs. O. C. Locke and Mrs. W. H. Lytle, who are taking the places of Mrs. Walter McDougal, Mrs. J. L. Van Doren, Mrs. W. H. Burghardt, Jr., and Mrs. W. H. Eldridge, retiring members. The additional names which complete the membership list are those of Mrs. Henry W. Meyers, Mrs. T. A. Livesley, Mrs. John J. Roberts, Mrs. V. M. Plimpton, Mrs. W. H. Root, Mrs. John H. McNary and Mrs. T. C. Smith, Jr.

The week's gathering was essentially a business affair, the first bridge games, and the first luncheon, to be Monday afternoon when Mrs. Meyers will again preside as hostess.

Mrs. Louis Leadbetter and Mrs. J. E. Law, both charming new additions to Salem's social life, were the major guests at the bridge tea, for which Mrs. E. G. Shifley was hostess, Thursday afternoon, and which was one of the most delightful contributions on the week's calendar.

A simple decorative motif, developed with zinnias and dahlias in tones of russet and yellow, surrounded the players who circled four small tables for the game, card honors being given to Mrs. J. W. Harbison.

At the tea hour additional guests dropped in, Mrs. Shipley being assisted by Mrs. Frank Spars, Mrs. G. F. Chambers, and Mrs. Law. The guest list included about 25.

Mrs. Warren Tuit of Moscow, Idaho, arrived in Salem yesterday to remain a fortnight as the house guest of Mrs. A. N. Bush. Mrs. Bush also has as her guest her mother, Mrs. John Hughes of Portland, who has been here for about a week.

A charming visitor, whose sojourn of several weeks has been marked by many lovely affairs, was Mrs. Edward A. Jaquins of Los Angeles, who departed for her home Friday night after being entertained as the house guest of her parents, Superintendent and Mrs. Harwood Hall, at Chemawa. Officers and their wives of the institution extended numerous social courtesies to the visitor, every day of her stay being filled to overflowing with dinners, dances, luncheons, card parties and teas.

Salem friends of the Halls motored out to be guests at the card party which Superintendent and Mrs. Hall gave for their daughter Tuesday night, and for the "at home" which complimented her Wednesday afternoon.

The latter event was a charming affair, a wealth of Caroline Testout roses and potted plants ornamenting the rooms of the Hall residence. The dining table was centered with a large bowl of roses, smart little favor buttonnais being given to each of the guests.

Mrs. Hall was assisted by Miss Olive Skipton and Mrs. Sherman, who presided at the samovars, and by Mrs. Bicknell and Miss Shouder, who served. Guests numbered nearly 50.

Mrs. W. Connell Dyer returned last night from Portland where she was the guest of relatives and friends during a brief sojourn.

Mrs. Earl Coulson Flegel left Tuesday for Denver, Colo., where she will join her husband for the winter. She accompanied the Deckebachs as far as that place the latter going on to Cincinnati.

Mrs. W. Carlton Smith returned from Portland Thursday evening where she spent the week as the house guest of Mrs. Page H. Broyles, formerly of Salem.

Mrs. Hilda Tillinghast, who is attending the University of Oregon this winter, is spending the week-end with her parents Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Tillinghast.

Dr. D. M. Fields, for the last year or so located at Astoria was a week-end visitor at the home of Dr. and Mrs. T. C. Smith, Jr.

Senator Charles L. McNary, who is leaving for Washington, D. C., shortly after election, was the honor guest at a smart dinner party presided over by Dr. and Mrs. T. C. Smith, Jr., Thursday evening. Graceful pink gladioli and maidenhair fern in an art basket made a lovely centerpiece for the table, all the appointments conforming to the pink color note. Covers were arranged for Senator McNary, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Livesley, Mr. and Mrs. David Eyre, Mrs. M. A. Goff and the hosts.

Society folk are following with considerable interest the work of

Miss Margaret Rodgers in modeling and sculpture, which she is continuing seriously, going up to Eugene, Tuesday of each week, to
