Miss Margaret Rodgers had as her guests over the week-end a group of popular young Portland folk. Miss Cornelia Tevis, Miss Virginia Tevis, Coleman Wheeler, Harry Jaeger and Lloyd Jaeger, who returned to Portland Sunday night.

Mrs. W. Connel Dyer returned home Saturday night from Portland, where she was briefly entertained by her cousin, Mrs. Jacob Kamm. She went down to meet a group of friends of the Kamm's who were in the city from Honolulu. A dinner at the University club Thursday evening was for them and Mrs. Dyer.

Mrs. R. M. Hofer was a visitor in Portland the last of the week, returning home Saturday night.

Mrs. Lee L. Gilbert is home from Portland where she visited friends for several days last week.

Beginning today, and holding over tomorrow, at the Hotel Portland, will be the state conference of National League of Women's Voters. The conference will call together women from various parts of the state who were recently organized by the state organizer Miss Gertrude Watson, whose trip to Salem a fortnight ago was resultant in the forming of the Salem chapter of the Oregon League.

Mrs. Z. J. Riggs being named president. Miss Cornelia Marvin, chairman of the Research committee, is slated to make the final address of the convention, her subject to be "Women in the Orient."

Mrs. W. Everett Anderson, manager of the Salem Musical bureau, returned from Monmouth yesterday, where she went in the interest of the trio of concerts, which are to be given under the auspices of the bureau in Salem, this winter. The normal school as well as a large representation of the people of Monmouth is much enthused over the opportunity offered to promote the events, and subscribed generously.

Mrs. William Bell is home from a short visit with friends in Portland.

One of the happiest gatherings which the week-end witnessed was the celebration in Portland Saturday, when Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Mills of Salem, and their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mills, commemorated their wedding anniversaries. The date marked the 30th year for the former and the first for the latter. The occasion was also in observance of J. A. Mills' birthday.

The group were joined by another son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Mills, and their young son Waldo, Jr., who motored up from Hood River. All were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mills at the Royal Arms.

Announcement of a marriage that is much interest here, is that of Miss Florence Rose Coffield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Coffield of Goldendale, Wash., to Theodore Byars, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Byars of the same place, the wedding being an event of Sunday, October 18. A brother of the bridegroom, Rev. W. N. Byars, who is attending Willamette university this winter, went home to officiate at the ceremony.

The bridegroom is a grandson of General and Mrs. W. H. Byars, his father being reared in the Capital city. The young folks will make their home in Goldendale. Both are graduates of the high school of Goldendale, the wedding culminating a romance that began there. Mr. Byars will be associated in business with his father in the Klickitat Abstract company.

Miss Lea Nichols left Sunday evening for a two months visit with her uncle, H. G. Nichols at Long Beach, Cal.

Miss Miriam Woodberry of New York city, field worker for the Home missionary societies of the Congregational church will be the guest of honor at a large tea this afternoon, given by the ladies social circles of the Central Congregational church.

The church parlors will be embellished with a wealth of autumn foliage and flowers, the tea tables to be particularly distinctive. Hostesses will be Mrs. E. M. McKee, Mrs. W. A. Martin, Mrs. Thomas Hall, Mrs. Harry Rose, Mrs. William Gruchow, Mrs. G. E. Terwilliger and Mrs. W. W. Cory. The tea will be at 2 o'clock. Miss Woodberry to speak during the afternoon on subjects with which she is particularly acquainted. A musical program will also be given. In the evening Miss Woodberry will again speak, the men of

Difficult to Keep Your Hair Wavy? Read This

If you have not yet tried the new way, the silmerine way, by all means do so. You'll never again use the ruinous heated iron. The curliness will appear so perfectly natural and the hair will be so beautifully lustrous, instead of dried and parched. Thus liquid silmerine serves also as a beneficial dressing for the hair. It is neither sticky nor greasy, but quite pleasant to use. It should be applied with a clean tooth brush before putting up the hair, drawing the brush through the hair from root to tip. The hair will have the loveliest curls and waves imaginable in three hours, and it will be easy to manage, no matter how you do it up. A few ounces of the liquid from your druggist will last a long time.

the church to be her audience, when they assemble for their first regular monthly banquet of the winter. The women of the church will serve this luncheon on Friday last winter, but in its short existence it has become one of the most worthwhile and interesting subdepartments of the church.

A pretty affair of Saturday night was the dinner over which Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Clover presided as hosts. A yellow floral centerpiece was used, the minor decorative detail also carrying out this color note. Covers were laid for nine.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Niemeyer and son Stuart were last-of-the-week visitors in Portland.

Mrs. W. S. Mott is leaving this morning for Astoria, where she goes to witness a play that her son James Mott is producing for a civic organization Wednesday and Thursday nights. While there she will be the guest of her son and daughter-in-law, her visit to cover several days. Before her return home she will also be entertained by another son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd Mott of Vancouver Barracks. Mrs. Mott will be away for about three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. William Muir, of Springbrook, Ore., and Miss Irene Deuch of St. Joseph, Ore., were week-end guests of Mrs. Elizabeth Miller.

An enjoyable event of Thursday night was the "Country Fair," for which the Artisan lodge was responsible. It was given in their rooms of the I. O. O. F. building. A splendid program was given, and there were numerous prizes, appropriate to a "real" country fair, introduced for the pleasure of the crowd. Eighteen members of the Woodburn lodge were present, and there was also a large representation of outside folk. It was the first open meeting of the year for the lodge.

The committee in charge was composed of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Kriesel, Mrs. P. E. Anderson, Mrs. Williamson, Miss Bertha Waldorf, Miss Echo Hunt and Miss Cole.

Mrs. J. B. Litterer and Mrs. E. E. Fisher will be joint hostesses for the West Central circle of First Methodist church, Wednesday afternoon at half past two o'clock. Matters of business will usurp the greater portion of the time. The meeting will be held at the residence of Mrs. Litterer.

State-wide interest centers this week in the annual convention of the Oregon Parent-Teacher association, which is a branch of the National Congress of Mothers, which opens in Portland Wednesday evening at 8 p. m. at the Y. W. C. A. It is expected that several hundred women will be in attendance from all over the state, as representatives from various associations.

Mrs. C. W. Hayhurst of Portland will preside. The parent's educational bureau, home economics, education, thrift, public health, kindergarten and the work of the Parent-Teacher association will be some of the subjects discussed. Superintendent J. A. Churchill and Miss Cornelia Marvin will be the speakers from Salem.

Miss Grace Babcock returned Saturday night from California, where she spent six weeks as the guest of friends, several of them being former Salem residents, who joined in making her sojourn pleasant. In San Francisco, Miss Babcock was the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Wyant, well-known in Salem, and in Oakland she was the guest of her cousin Miss Ida Haas, and Mr. and Mrs. Percy Ried (Gertrude Fawk).

A Halloween social is the order of events for the Order of the Eastern Star tonight, the program and supper, which will suggest this date on the calendar, to follow the regular business session of the order. The committee in charge is headed by Mrs. David Wright, chairman, Mrs. W. P. Fowle, Mrs. Cora Reid, Miss Mary Bellinger, and Mrs. O. A. Olson.

Miss Grace Fawk was a week-end visitor in Albany, where she was entertained as the guest of Miss Mary Louise Quinn.

Flowers and messages of sympathy are being sent to Mrs. R. L. White who is convalescing from a severe illness at her apartments, 291 South Church street.

Miss Emma Snook was the week-end guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Traver, in Portland.

Miss Ethel Liston entertained with a line party Saturday night.

New Way to Remove Hairs Creates Sensation

Actually Takes Out the Roots What beauty specialists regard as one of the most important discoveries in recent years is the silmerine method of removing superfluous hair. Its great advantage, of course, lies in the fact that it actually removes the hair roots. It does this easily, instantly, harmlessly. Sufferers from the affliction named need no longer despair. The actual hair-roots come out before your very eyes, leaving the skin as smooth and hairless as a babe's. Because it offers such complete relief, a stick of silmerine is the most inexpensive thing a woman can buy for the removal of hairy growths. For the same reason druggists are having an enormous demand for it. You can use it with entire safety: it is so harmless one could even eat it without any ill effect.

at the Oregon theatre, in celebration of her birthday, culminating the evening with a supper at the Grey-Belle.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Bennett entertained as their house guests during the latter part of the week, Mr. Bennett's cousin, W. E. Bennett, of Tremont, Ill. It was the first meeting in 35 years of the two latter.

CHAPTER 722

WHAT TROUBLED MADGE AS SHE WAITED BESIDE THE WOUNDED OFFICER.

"Ah—" The word was hardly more than a breath, but it startled me as if it had been the ping of a bullet close to my ear.

For it came from the lips of the wounded officer whom I had been delegated to me, that calm, by my presence the delirious imaginings of the wounded man before me.

I looked down quickly into his face, although my eyes were somewhat blurred by the rush of tears which had come to them at the thoughts of my husband, and which I had in some fashion kept from shedding. The wounded officer's eyes were open, and he was looking intently at me. The wild light—of which the nurse had told me—was in them.

"You are—real?" he said slowly, doubtfully. "You are—really?" "Very much alive," I answered cheerily, for instinct told me this was the best way to reassure him. As I spoke I took my hand from his forehead.

"He frowned as I did so, and looked like an unhappy child. "Don't—take me away," he said painfully. "I—like—"

"I'll Not Go Away."

Reluctantly I resumed the smoothing of his hair back from his forehead, the service which the nurse had requested of me while he was delirious. I was furious at myself because I could not control the flush which overspread my face at his request.

"Why did your eyes have tears in them just now?" he asked, and this time his words came less painfully, closer together. "Are you hurt badly, after all? I've been afraid they were lying to me."

His voice rose in excitement. I saw that the only way to quiet him was the method one would use with a frightened child. I bent a little closer to him.

"I don't see what you mean," and listen carefully while I tell you the absolute truth. I am not hurt. I am very well, and you must have been mistaken about the tears in my eyes. You don't see any there now, do you?"

I smiled at him as I asked the last question, and a slow, weak grin curved the corners of his mouth.

"Nary a one," he returned with a pitiful attempt at lightness, and then the nurse intervened. "Take this now, please," she said, "and then close your eyes and try to go to sleep."

She held a formidable-looking dose of medicine out to him. He looked up at her rebelliously.

"Will she stay right here and not let go my hand?" The nurse looked at me, a calm, professional glance, yet I could not but imagine that her eyelashes veiled a quizzical look. I felt myself flushing again, but knew now that I had only one answer for me to give. I looked down into the pleading eyes of the wounded man.

"I'll not go away. I promise you. "Thank you. All right, nurse." Obediently he swallowed the dose she gave him, smiled up at me with a touch of whimsicality, and closed his eyes like a tired child. For several torturing minutes his fingers and eyes twitched restlessly, and his head jerked occasionally from side to side as if he were in pain. But gradually he became quieter, and before long was drawing deep, regular, restful breaths, and sleeping as naturally as if he were just an ordinarily fatigued man.

"But I've Promised."

"I think you can slip away now," the nurse murmured in my ear. "He will never notice your going." I felt vaguely, foolishly resentful of the air of complete authority which enveloped her. It was as if she had said: "You have done very well, child, but we don't need you any longer."

pulse which made me say determinedly: "But I promised him I wouldn't leave him while he slept, and I must keep my word." (To be continued)

Naval Itineraries for 1921 Are Announced

Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels announces that the navy department has issued instructions to the commander of the Atlantic fleet and to the commander of the Pacific fleet to submit tentative itineraries for the foreign cruises to be made by the respective fleets in the summer of 1921.

The present idea is that the Atlantic fleet will visit ports of the east coast of South America and also Capetown, and possibly other South African ports, including passing the island of St. Helena, the home of Napoleon during his captivity.

The Pacific fleet is expected to visit the South Sea islands and ports in Australia and New Zealand. It is probable that the Pacific fleet will be able to visit ports in southern New Zealand and also Tasmania, or Vandiemans' land.

After the completion of this winter's joint maneuvers in the Pacific in the months of January and February, the fleets will proceed to their target grounds on or before March 10, and finish up all target practice of the present year. It is expected that this will be finished about May 1, then, after six weeks in home yards for repairs and the customary leave, it is believed that the vessels will get away on their foreign cruises about June 15, 1921.

Last week showed about 2300 enlistments, and the enlisted personnel of the navy has risen to over 112,000 men. Telegraphic instructions has been received from the bureau of navigation to discontinue enlistments and re-enlistments of seamen for submarine duty.
