REPUBLICANS FOR STANFIELD

HARDING NEEDS
REPUBLICAN SENATE

Oregon Needs Protective Tariff

R. N. STANFIELD.

As is generally known, the present Republican majority in the United States senate is just one vote. Republican control of that body is therefore in jeopardy. It is the realization of this fact which is causing Oregon's Republicans to unite in support of the candidacy of the Republican nominee for United States senator, Robert N. Stanfield. With a difference of only one vote in the present senate, Republican voters have awakened to the fact that if they vote for George E. Chamberlain they may see that very act turning the control of the senate over to the Democrats. On the other hand, by electing Robert N. Stanfield it is possible that his single vote may give the Republicans control of the senate, and thus put that body solidly back of Harding.

Oregon producers are fearful of the effect that the election of Cox and a Democratic senate would have upon them. It is quite evident that under Democratic rule rival products of foreign origin would offer a serious menace to many Oregon products. If the American standard of living is to be maintained, Oregon farmers, livestock men, fruit growers, lumbermen and wool growers must receive a price for their products which will enable them to make a reasonable profit over and above the cost of production. They will be unable to obtain such reasonable profit, or any profit at all, unless a Republican administration is elected to levy protective tariff duties just high enough to save our producers from the ruinous competition threatened by Canadian wheat and lumber, New Zealand butter, Australian wool, Argentine corn and beef, European meat and hides and Manchurian beans and peas.

To hamper a Republican president with a Democratic senate flies in the face of the well accepted principle that government management should be centered, so that the people can correctly place the responsibility for success or failure. The feeling among Oregon Republicans is, therefore, becoming quite general that Harding, if elected, is entitled to the support of a Republican senate and that, therefore, Oregon should elect the Republican senatorial nominee, Robert N. Stanfield, to help back up Harding.

Stanfield for Senator Republican club.—(Paid adv.)

More Books Are Circulated Than During Any Previous September

The monthly business meeting of the Salem library board was held Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The report of the circulation department for the month of September showed an increase of 500 over any previous September report, and gave a total of 4059 books loaned by the library in the past month. Of this number 1366 were for children.

The library now contains 15,633 books and pamphlets, 253 of which are catalogued pamphlets.

Three new employees have been engaged during the month, all of whom meet with the approval of the board and their positions were officially ratified. These were Miss Ellen Thielson and Miss Deyor, employed as desk assistants and F. E. Barker as janitor.

The advisability of holding the usual lecture course was taken under consideration and a question arose as to the need of such a course, in view of the fact that different societies and organizations are bringing into the city similar courses. The consensus of opinion appeared to be in favor of obtaining prominent speakers when available, to give lectures, possibly once a month, and the plan of taking up much discussed topics of the day to be reviewed was also given consideration. An expression from the public on this point would be greatly appreciated by the board, which is very desirous of doing that which will bring the most satisfactory results to the patrons of the library.

Book week, an idea which has developed through the Boy Scout movement along this line, is for the purpose of calling attention to the choice of books to be used as gifts to young people, and will be observed the week beginning November 15.

ROOT PLACES ALL BLAME ON WILSON

bear upon the action of the party, the well informed opinion of the civilized world, and the agreement were to violate it by making war without the stipulated delays necessary for arbitration or investigation and report, or were to make war in violation of the unanimous opinion of the other nations, then the practical outlawry of that party from the advantages of trade, commerce and customary intercourse with the members of the society of nations, with all the consequences flowing from such an outlawry.

Objections to League
The principal objections to the league, Mr. Root said, "may be roughly classified as follows:
"First, objections to the general offensive alliance with all members of the league established by article X.
"Second, objections to submitting to the council of the league questions of purely American policy, such as the Monroe doctrine or questions of immigration, upon which the European countries approaching the subject from an entirely different point of view and with opposing or different interests would almost necessarily differ from the American policy.
"Third, the scheme practically thrust aside the whole system of development of international law and of arbitral decision which had been the settled policy of the United States for many generations, and depended for the treatment of questions of policy upon the council, which would be composed not of judges, but of diplomatic representatives of the powers.
"Fourth, that the scheme created a super-government which would destroy the independence of the United States.
"Fifth, that the working of the plan under the covenant was not so arranged as to coincide with the constitution government of the United States; that under it the president alone could practically carry on the entire foreign affairs of the United States by agents of his own selection to the practical exclusion of the popular branch of our government."
"We stand alone
Mr. Wilson, "being unwilling to accept reservations to the peace treaty and the league of nations, has left us "practically where we stand today," Mr. Root said.
"Mr. Cox declares," he continued, "that he will insist upon the treaty, that he will insist upon the agreement creating the league, and that upon that understanding Mr. Wilson is supporting Mr. Cox for the presidency. The Democratic platform says substantially the same thing.
"On the other hand, Mr. Harding, who voted for the ratification of the treaty with the senate reservations, declares that "he would do it again under the same circumstances."
A League Is Proposed
Mr. Root said it is plain that the issue is not between a league of nations and no league of nations. The question is whether the agreement creating the league shall be accepted absolutely unchanged, or shall be modified to meet American objections. "I would be glad to have the provisions of the agreement changed so as to obviate these objections. Then would follow an ordinary common sense negotiation as to the best way to obviate the objections. Regarding this process I have to say:
"First, I think the American objections can be met and obviated without interfering with the scheme of the league or impairing its usefulness.
"Second, without pretending to any special knowledge, I think there are clear indications that other nations concerned are willing to make such changes as are necessary to meet the American objections.
"Third, I think the objections ought to be met and obviated. The covenant contains some provisions which are unnecessary.
