AN INTERNATIONAL STORY

There came as a bolt from Heaven orders to cross the channel. Her Jamie must go.

After he fell in love, he had mursed the illness that kept him in England, but now he must report for duty in France. He went, the room was given up, Jeannie took a position and life went on almost as before, but not quite.

One day in an American paper she saw his name among those, who had been killed, and darkness settled upon her mind. The little child that was coming to her must be born in the land of its father, it must not be a "foreigner." So she crossed the sea to New York. How this was done she has never been able to explain. Like poor bereft Nancy who crossed the Alps in the winter, God tempered the wind to the shorn lamb.

At New York the Red Cross sent her to a quiet hospital, where her man child came to her, not a foreigner but an American as she proudly thought. The light on the tiny face had cleared her clouded brain.

She then asked to be sent to her husband's people, and gave their addresses. Messages crossed the continent from the Red Cross in New York to the Red Cross in the city called Peace, not far from the western sea, "Shall we send this girl and her child to you." "Yes, her husband was one of us, we will care for her," was the return message.

Jamie's father and mother were visited, but they, in their grief could not be made to realize that their little boy as they thought of him, could have left a wife and child. But when the Red Cross visitor with Jeannie and the baby stood on the little porch, the old mother involuntarily reached out her arms for the little white bundle which stood for all that was left of her bonnie boy, who slept in France, and she called "Father the baby has Jamie's eyes and the girl is Jamie's wife, she is not a foreigner."

Your part in this is your dollar for the November Roll Call and a bit of your heart, always. Entered at the Postoffice in Salem, Oregon, as second class matter.

Labor's capital is only impaired through illness or idleness. and even this loss is largely preventable.

Especially preventable is the idleness that comes to the American laborer by emplaying the cheap labor of other countries to do our work. Just at present we are paying at the rate of 2 billion to 3 billion a year in wages to foreign workers for goods such as should be made in this country.

Three billion dollars is 6 per cent. of 50 billion dollars. Consequently, 50 billion dollars of labor's capital is useless and in the alley back of the fire hall profitless.

Then, too, it should be realized that the imports of 3 billion promote the campaign for a two dollars' worth of competitive goods, most of it a loss of wages, platoon system which will afford means a loss to merchants, builders, railroads and others, and them a decent living condition. directly or indirectly affects every one in the country.
