

COX FAVORS CLARIFYING OF LEAGUE

Special appeals were made through the state today by the governor to miners and others of the working classes and these were loudly applauded. He told of the "mine run" payment, the mine safety, workmen's compensation and other Ohio laws. Business in Opposition. Reiterating that "big business" was opposing him, because he said, it did not like the "progressive administration of six years of Cox in Ohio," he declared that "big business" opposed his "use of the golden rule instead of the bayonet," in industrial controversies. At Hinton, a railroadmen's memorial presented to the governor said 100 had contributed $1 each toward expense of the candidate's special train today. West Virginia gave the governor some of his most picturesque campaigning, including a tour of 20 miles of motoring through mining villages in deep mountain gorges. Stores were closed and school children dismissed, to line the roads with flags, and smutty-faced miners emerged to greet the candidate. A negro "jazz" band on an automobile truck furnished music for the motor caravan. At Charleston, the governor spoke to several thousand persons about the state capital steps, and here tonight he addressed a crowd in a large hall and also a theater audience during a halt in the performance of a musical comedy star. A. B. Kooztz, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, and other West Virginia candidates accompanied him. The governor's addresses today were at Hinton, Guinnmont, at the Oak Hill fair grounds, Beckley, Mount Hope, Fayetteville, Fayette, Montgomery, Cabin Creek, Charleston, St. Albans and here tonight. Several were brief platform talks.

turn to the legal status of peace and to the enjoyment of these rights which they had temporarily surrendered under the circumstances of war. So long as war was on, Republicans upheld the hands of the administration, forgetting party considerations, and gave their vote in support of war measures far more generously than did their political opponents. Yet an autocratic administration repaid this loyalty with the demand, in the campaign of 1918, that Republicans be removed from every position of influence and power. That demand the country rejected. It was the first time in the history of this nation that an administration had been defeated in the midst of a foreign war. That defeat would have been ample admonition to any administration not entirely absorbed in its own peculiar policies and purposes. But it apparently was unheeded by the powers at Washington. Neglecting the acute domestic situation the administration suddenly conceived an interest in foreign affairs that contrasted impressively with its lack of concern for them in the period before we were drawn into the war. U. S. Concerns Neglected. "So while immediate and practical concerns were being neglected, while reconstruction and reorganization of our own country were forgotten, the administration was devoting itself to the chimera of a world reorganization. The Republican congress, that had been elected in the autumn of 1918, attempted to and did, institute measures in the hope of putting an end to the treasury deficit and bringing in economy and system into our national finances. But the president vetoed that measure. The administration went right on spending vast sums in excess of our revenues, offering no constructive inspiration or leadership; apparently forgetting our domestic difficulties in its engrossment with the chimera of world reconstruction. "This, in a word, is the record of the administration now about to retire from power, which seeks to have its policies perpetuated. The country will decline to give its confidence and its mandate to that party or those policies. It remembers that the Republican party fought the Civil war and afterwards restored and unified the nation. It believes that the Republican party is capable of repeating that service, and because it so believes, it is going to return the Republican power to power. The plain people who, on the whole, have been raised to a new and higher level, are not only convinced that they are entitled to remain in this new plane, but they must rely upon the constructive abilities of the Republican party to keep them there. It is our purpose to accomplish exactly this. While we will oppose every suggestion of revolution or disintegration, we do stand for every measure of evolution and development that tends to carry the masses of the nation forward and upward.

Platform Is Sound. "During the campaign now about ending, the Republican party has proposed in its platform, and developed in the utterances of its leaders, a program which contemplates equal opportunity for all. It recognizes the vices of exploitation and profiteering. It has declared for wise and practical measures looking to co-operation in production and in marketing. It recognizes that, in all measures to preserve equality of opportunity, there must be a recognition of the fact that greed and cunning must be held in check if we are to insure that true character and worth shall be given every opportunity to share in the advantages that the community can extend to its members.

The Republican proposes in the realm of international affairs such an association of nations as will most effectively further the aspirations for world-wide and permanent peace without sacrificing any part of the independence of the American nation. It believes that America can and must bear its full part in the responsibilities of the world, but it always believes that America alone must decide what that part shall be. It goes to the people assured that they will recognize its superiority as an instrumentality of administration and that in the election now impending they will give it the certificate of their confidence and trust."

Kansas City Promoter Would Use Oregon Water

William T. Reed of Kansas City has filed with Percy A. Cupper, state engineer, an application for authority to appropriate water from Jump-Off Joe creek and Winona reservoir for the irrigation of 1240 acres of land in Josephine county. The development contemplates the construction of about eight miles of ditch at an estimated cost of $100,000. Other applications have been received as follows:

The Shevlin-Nixon company has filed an application for a permit to appropriate water from Pauline creek for domestic use, for log pond, and steam power in connection with saw mill near Bend.

By Mrs. Kate McDonald of Bayville, Or., covering the appropriation of water from Rock creek for the irrigation of a small tract in Wheeler county.

By E. B. Graham of Grandview, Or., an application covering the storage of water in Fly creek reservoir for irrigation and domestic purposes in Jefferson county.

By Leonard L. Goodwin of Vale, Or., covering an appropriation of water from the Owyhee river for irrigation purposes in Malheur county.

OREGON NOTES

PORTLAND—Everything is now in readiness for commencement of work on the proposed 100 ton factory of the recently incorporated Vegetable Oil Mills company. Its operation will mean the importation annually of $4,000,000 worth of raw copra and the handling of double that amount of the finished product. It will provide return cargoes for vessels carrying Oregon pine to Australia and New Zealand. Single orders for coconut oil from inland manufacturers sometimes reach the Pacific coast manufacturers and importers in such volume.

CREAM FOR CATARRH OPENS UP NOSTRILS

Tells How To Get Quick Relief from Head-Colds. It's Splendid!
