

SOCIETY

By MOLLY BRUNK

TONIGHT there is scheduled for the followers of Terpsichore, the first dancing party of the season for the members of the Elks' lodge, their ladies and friends, which promises to be largely attended, and desirable, as everything that this organization gives always is. The dance committee of the lodge, which is arranging this as well as all the others that are to follow, is composed of Karl Hines, Budd Welch and J. E. Trophy.

Miss Corriella Marvin, state librarian, returned the first of the week from Tacoma, where she visited a brother. She was also a visitor in Portland during her absence, making several addresses. The Modern Writers section of the Salem Arts League will hold a regular fortnightly session to-night in the league room on the first floor of the Salem public library.

Members of the Salem Ministerial association and their wives met for a social hour at the Central Congregational church Monday noon, a three-course luncheon by the women of the church calling them together.

The big table was embellished with autumn decorations. Rev. and Mrs. H. C. Stover presided as hosts. During the time, Elbert Lachelle, pianist, and Leonard Chadwick, violinist, rendered several numbers and a business session followed.

Once a month, hereafter, these affairs will be held, the next meeting being at Leslie Methodist church November 22.

Mrs. Z. J. Riggs and her mother, Mrs. Jane Walling, spent several days in Portland this week.

Mrs. W. L. Datzel of Portland, came up to join her husband the first of the week for the Arabian Knights dance.

A most appreciated courtesy was extended by Superintendent George W. Hug Tuesday when he made up a motor party to hear Dr. Bagley, the famous head of psychology, of Columbia university, New York City, who was brought to Oregon by the university and Monmouth Normal college. A company of Superintendent Hug were Principal J. C. Nelson, Mrs. C. C. Clark, Miss Gretchen Cramer and Miss Margaret Cosper.

Members of the Nancy Hanks Mothers' club of the Lincoln club of the Lincoln school will meet in the school auditorium at 3:20 o'clock this afternoon, to hear Dr. J. O. Matthis discuss the vaccination amendment. All women of the district are extended an invitation to attend.

A wealth of scarlet rose tips, snowberries, marigolds, and autumn foliage gave the Masonic temple a festive appearance Tuesday afternoon, when members of the Order of the Eastern Star met for a regular social session. The long banquet table was called into service, and around this the 40 women present were seated for the luncheon, which was suggestive of the Halloween season, pumpkin pies, and apple cider appearing on the menu. A single rose tip appeared at each place as a favor.

Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Byron B. Herrick, Mrs. James E. Godfrey, Mrs. Walter D. Hugh and Mrs. W. A. Rutherford. Assisting them were Mrs. John Biber and Miss Lela Rigdon.

Mrs. W. T. Davies will have as her guests over the week-end her aunts, Mrs. William Shewey of Astoria, Or., and Mrs. J. J. Tingle of Gladstone, who will arrive today.

The members of the Adult Bible class of the Central Congregational church will assemble in the church parlors tonight for a Halloween party. Wednesday night the young women's and the young men's classes enjoyed a similar affair, about 40 being present. For both occasions decorations of autumn leaves and Halloween novelties remained the same.

CHAPTER 731

WHY LILLIAN SAID "FOR GOODNESS SAKE—GET IT OVER WITH!"

"Dearest Dicky-bird,"

The words started up at me from the page I held in my hand. I did not need to hunt for the signature to the mysterious letter to Dicky which my mother-in-law had sent to me. I knew only too well the dashing, bold handwriting of Grace Draper.

I had been prepared for something radically wrong by Lillian's manner, but the thing implied by this salutation made me feel fairly ill.

It was not the form of the words that sickened me—Lillian would probably have addressed a letter to Dicky in the same manner—but the inference they conveyed to a friendship which not even my husband's knowledge of the girl's infamy had affected.

She had tried to murder me, she had shot Dicky and herself in the dramatic interview she had staged after her attempt to drown me, and her open association with Harry Underwood—Dicky's friend and Lillian's husband—was a shameful thing. And with my husband's knowledge of all this, this letter to him in her chattering, familiar fashion!

My eyes sought Lillian's. She was watching me soberly, and there was a touch of mournfulness in her gaze.

"Better read it quickly, dear," she said quietly, and I turned my eyes again to the letter.

"Taking a Chance."

"I can imagine your surprise," the letter began, "when you open this miserably scrawled envelope and find a letter from little me inside. But I don't trust that cat at the studio any more—she's too much in love with you herself to suit my book, poor little, washed-out la-de-da F. F. V.—it is to laugh, isn't it, sweetheart?—and as I didn't want my big boy to miss his usual letter I thought I'd take a chance and address it out to your 'country estate'."

Again my eyes sought Lillian's, although until she spoke I was really not conscious that I had looked at her.

For I was utterly bewildered at this reference to the "cat at the studio." I knew, of course, that Edith Fairfax, the girl art student whose ambitions in dramatic writing Dicky was furthering, shared a studio with her sister, Lella, in the same building which housed my husband. I had been more than a little jealous of the delicate, pretty Virginia girl, whose secret love for Dicky I had guessed, but I hadn't dreamed that her friendship with Dicky had reached the stage of overseeing his studio and censoring his correspondence.

Queerly enough this reference to Edith Fairfax hurt me more poignantly than did the extravagant terms of endearment with which Grace Draper had embellished her letter.

"As far as that exquisitely witty remark about Edith Fairfax is concerned," Lillian said, and I noted gratefully that she evidently was following the movement of my eyes and mentally re-reading the letter with me. "She's switched in on the wrong circuit. Dicky's more kinds of a fool than I have time to enumerate, but he is a kind of a fool yet."

"I said bitterly to myself that I couldn't agree with her, and I wondered dully how she could still believe in Dicky after such proof of his baseness as that which was in my hands.

My eyes strayed back to the letter. I loathed every word of it, but it had a horrible fascination for me. I felt that I must miss no syllable of it.

"Of course, I know I'm taking a chance in sending this to Marvyn. That hen-minded frau of yours may open it, but I'm rather banking that she won't because it's addressed in this fool scrawl. She will probably figure that it is a begging letter from somebody living in a slum, and so be afraid she may catch some awful disease if she touches it. I have just laughed myself sick over the remembrance of some things you have told me about her fool theories."

A Primitive Impulse.

I shall always feel a hidden sympathy for a murderer who kills in the heat of passion after this. The beautiful, mocking face of Grace Draper rose before me. I could imagine her, laughing mockery directed toward my follies, and Dicky—to think, he could have discussed me with her, made fun of me for her amusement! I found myself crooking my fingers in a clawing motion, and I knew that the primitive feline impulse to rend and tear my enemy had me by the throat.

Lillian came over to me, put a calming hand on my shoulder, and said forcibly:

"For goodness sake, Madge, finish that awful thing and get it over with!"

DRIVE BEGINS NOVEMBER 15

W. C. T. U. Institutes Campaign for Children's Home in Benton County

According to word just received by officers of the local branch of the W. C. T. U. from state campaign headquarters in Portland, the work of organizing the state for the $25,000 drive for a W. C. T. U. children's farm home is fast gaining headway.

Although the actual campaign for funds will not start until November 15, W. C. T. U. workers throughout the state are perfecting their campaign organizations in order to be ready for a systematic canvass at the outset of the drive.

The movement for the establishment of a farm home for dependent and orphan children originated with the Woman's Christian Temperance union, and so enthused was it over the possibility of an institution of this kind, that the state organization of the W. C. T. U. decided to make it one of its big achievements before the close of the present year.

It is planned to establish a farm home in Benton county near the state agricultural college, where homeless and dependent waifs may be given home training under all home influences. There they will receive the best of moral, educational and physical advantages.

Corporation Formed. The W. C. T. U. has formed a special corporation under the laws of the state to inaugurate and operate a farm-home of this character. Governor Ben W. Olcott has given the movement his stirring endorsement. Welfare workers in every part of the state have lauded the W. C. T. U. for its humanitarian efforts.

It has been estimated that $125,000 will be needed to put the farm home in operation. The local quota has not yet been announced but it will be comparatively small. The local branch is confident that the good, broad-hearted people of this community will over-subscribe to this fund when the drive gets under way.

HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS LEAD

Membership Campaign for Y. M. C. A. Boys' Department Progresses

With the high school teams leading their nearest competitor, Willamette university, by 2000 points, the membership campaign of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., which started last Monday, continues to bring Salem youths in closer touch with the "Y."

At 9 o'clock Thursday night the leading teams were lined up as follows:

First division—Salem high, 5000 points; Willamette, 3000.

Second division—Washington junior high, 2000 points; Lincoln, 1900.

Third division—Garfield, 2500 points; Richmond, 2000.

Keen rivalry has been aroused among the schools and it is expected that developments within the day may change considerably the present results.

Ex-Service Man Held on Charge of Larceny

William McDonald, an ex-service man, was arrested yesterday morning on a charge of larceny, by Officer A. L. Morelock. Wednesday afternoon a complaint was registered against McDonald for the alleged taking of a bicycle from William A. Shaw, which followed the disappearance of some clothing from the residence of Dr. G. E. Prime.

When arrested McDonald was on his way to Portland, having spent the night at a farm house about two and a half miles from this city. He will probably be given a hearing in justice court today.

Since his return from Siberia, McDonald was taken very sick with appendicitis necessitating an operation, which was performed by Dr. Prime at Willamette sanitarium. During this period, the Red Cross was active in caring for the soldier boy by paying his board in providing clothing, and the War Mothers frequently visited him. These kind ministrations appear to have had but little impression on the mind of McDonald, who was cared for until he was well able to work for himself. He is being held in the county jail awaiting trial.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair.

Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful and thousands of women and men who value their hair, taking that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drugstore for a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR
Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning, or broken-out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.
Because of its germ destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.
You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.
