REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

The Story of a Honeymoon

A Wonderful Romance of Married Life Wonderfully Told by ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 735

WHY MADGE IS TROUBLED BY THOUGHTS OF THE WOUNDED OFFICER.

Lillian's parting words followed me disturbingly as I walked down the hall toward the wounded officer's room. It was not the first time since the young man, at the risk of his own life, had brought me in safety to the hospital, that I had been annoyed by reference to his growing dependence upon me.

The observations were justified, moreover, by the attitude of the sick man. From the time when he had first come out of his delirium, soothed by my hand upon his head, he had repeatedly asked for me.

And when I was helping to care for him he clung to my hand as a sick child would to its mother's. If I moved away from the bedside his eyes followed me until I returned, and his nurse had found out that her rather obstinate patient would take food or medicine most docilely from me.

I half-suspected that she had capitalized the discovery and was making a convenience of me—that in many cases she could have languished without sending for me to help her. But send for me she did, until I was becoming obsessed by the fear that the young officer's dependence upon me was a subject for humorous comment among the nurses.

The thought annoyed me greatly, but it didn't trouble me half so much as the discovery that I myself was looking forward each day with actual eagerness to my visits of ministrations to the wounded man.

SWATHED IN MYSTERY.

All my life I have shamefacedly

ONE nice thing that folks say about our bread is that it is always of uniform quality. It doesn't vary from day to day, because like any tried and true friend it's the same yesterday, to-day and tomorrow.

recognized, tried assiduously to hide and to suppress an element in my personality utterly incongruous to the rest of my make-up. This is a passion for the romantic, the adventurous, the bizarre. It is the secret ruin in my nature to which I have brought the unlocking key in the golden days of his whirlwind courtship of me.

But, alas, life is no longer a romantic adventure to Dicky and me. It is more like a humdrum job that is up and down the hills and vales of a prosaic road, varied with only occasional spots of beauty, varied also—more so the pity—by stretches of exceedingly rough going.

Not since the days of my first acquaintance with Dicky, when every sight of his face was a romantic adventure, have I been so fascinated by his personality as I have been by the mystery-shrouded entity whom I know only as the "wounded officer down the hall." He is a man towering above his fellows, this soldier chap, who saved my life in such splendid fashion at the same time capturing single-handed, a most dangerous enemy spy. The story of that day at the inn rivalled the most exciting romantic tale which I had ever read, put to shade the exploits of my schoolgirl days.

The remembrance of that portion of the exciting drama in which it was my privilege to act a minor role, was ever present with me, while Lillian's recital of the wounded officer's arrival at our house, with his sullen captive crouching at his side, and my unconscious figure in the tonneau of the machine he had driven from the inn, had thrilled me tremendously. Part of my unusual interest in the visits I made to his sick room lay in the hope I had that some day I would hear from his own lips the missing links of the exciting story, links which no one but himself could supply.

But so far there had come no word of enlightenment from him. He had talked, slowly, haltingly, of many trifling things, but after he had satisfied himself of my safety he hadn't referred again to his perilous trip from the inn. He hadn't even mentioned his own name, and his mental condition had been so precarious that no one had dared to ask him concerning it.

Romance, mystery, valor, swathed him. It was no wonder that he occupied a far larger portion of my daily thoughts than I cared to admit even to myself.

WAS IT FANCY?

His nurse greeted me with relief just outside his door. She evidently had been watching for me. "He is very restless," she said, "and has been asking for you repeatedly. But he seems better and brighter than he has yet been. I think if you sit by him awhile and let him tell you the story of his life it will do him a world of good."

Her words were light, careless, her eyes smiling. Was it fancy, or did I read behind her manner a significance which brought the blood to my cheeks?

WELL KNOWN PASTOR DIES

Rev. Marcus M. Waltz Passes Away Yesterday in Hospital at Corvallis

Rev. Marcus M. Waltz of Brownsville died early yesterday in the hospital at Corvallis.

About 1889 Mr. Waltz came from Benton county and entered Willamette university where he made a host of friends, who greatly admired him for his gentle manners and kindly interest in his associates. He was an earnest student and always retained his membership in the Columbia River conference. Failing health forced him to retire and he spent several years in Salem, clerking in Patton's book store.

He is survived by his widow and three sons, Dr. Roy Waltz of Brownsville, Roswell Waltz and Lloyd Waltz who live near Monroe.

HARDING IS GIVEN GIFT

Senator's Home Precinct Gives Him Majority Over Cox

MARION, Ohio, Nov. 2.—Senator Harding's home precinct gave:

Harding, 573; Cox, 76. Four years ago the senator's precinct and gave democratic but a reapportionment had changed precinct lines.

While the senator was at dinner late in the evening a committee of employees of the Marion Star, his newspaper, called to present him with a gold printer's makeup rule and he came out on the front porch and with his voice choking with emotion, thanked them for their devotion.

"I don't know of any call," he said haltingly, as tears rolled down his cheeks, "that has aroused my emotions more than this. I have worked with you and I have tried to be honest with you; and God knows if I am called to responsibility I am going to be honest with everybody in the world. I don't know if I can meet these responsibilities fully, but I know that I can meet them with the same honesty that I have treated you."

"I am just a plain, ordinary fellow, but I can be square and that's all there is to it."

EXTRAS CAUSE COX TO SMILE

Governor With His Wife Receives Election Returns From His Office

DAYTON, Ohio, Nov. 2.—Other than casting his vote early in the day Governor Cox, democratic presidential candidate, apparently took a passive interest in the election, but tonight he went to his newspaper office to watch returns.

The governor was smiling when he reached the office at 7:30 p. m. accompanied by Mrs. Cox, but made no comment on the election. At that time the newsmen were in the streets with the first extra carrying news unfavorable to the candidate.

Outside his office a big crowd had gathered to await the record of the vote and it greeted the governor with a cheer. Simultaneously, a bulletin from his office showed that the governor had carried twelve of the 265 precincts in Montgomery county, including Dayton, by 294 votes.

During the day, most of which was spent at his home near here, the governor seemingly paid no attention to the early scattering returns. His first information came when he reached his office and then he offered no comment.

Yew Park Gets Wrong Signal on President

Because of a bobble in the manipulation of the signals of the Salem branch of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company last night, the residents of the Yew Park section of the city were informed that Cox had been elected president. The mistake was corrected by the proper signal a few moments later.

The company was able to flash the news of Harding's election to the Salem public at 9:20 o'clock. The signal was not repeated at 10 o'clock because of the connection between the power and the light motors. The signals, it is explained, caused a considerable disturbance to the former.

Ghosts Escorts for Silvertown Teachers

SILVERTOWN, Ore., Nov. 2.—A Halloween party was given in honor of the Silvertown teachers at the home of Miss Josephine Hammond Friday evening. The guests, as they arrived, were escorted across the lawn by five small ghosts. Upon entering the house they were compelled to go through a goblin's cave before reaching the

WHY HAVE CATARRH?

So Disagreeable to Yourself and All About You.

Catarrh is generally conceded to be a constitutional disease. Therefore it requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla which reaches every part of the system by thoroughly purifying and enriching the blood. This medicine removes the cause of the trouble, which if not checked may lead to more serious disease.

In 46 years of use and test Hood's Sarsaparilla has relieved many cases as told by voluntary letters of commendation. Why not get a bottle today and give it a trial? It combines economy and efficiency. Keep Hood's Pills on hand as a family cathartic.

living room, which was gaily decorated with Jack-o-lanterns, etc. The earlier part of the evening was spent with Halloween stunts of various sorts. About 10 o'clock the lights were put out and fortunes were told by Madame Zaza of Seattle. Lunch was served in individual baskets. The guests departed just at the hour of midnight. All of Silvertown's women teachers, 22 in number, were present.

TOWN IS CAPTURED.
LONDON, Nov. 1.—The Armenian town of Hadjin has been captured by Turkish nationalists who have massacred the inhabitants numbering 10,000, according to a dispatch to the Armenian bureau in London. These Armenians had been holding out against the attacking forces since March last.
