> CHAPTER No. 761. WHAT HAPPENED WHEN

MADGE STOLE AWAY FROM THE HOUSE THAT NIGHT.

My mother-in-law's eyes were Phone 175 full of consternation as she heard Cousin Agatha's exciting tidings of the sentries on the pipe line from Marvin to Stoneville Center. I saw that she considered my plan for getting away from the house unobserved was hopelessly lost. But I gave her a reassuring look, for I remembered, what she had 7-ROOM HOUSE, PAVED STREET AND evidently forgotten, that the tiny badge of the service which I wore concealed in my blouse was an 103 acres, 65 in cultivation, heavy dark soil, choice buildings, place all finished — 3% miles from railroad town.

190-acre farm, good buildings, to trade open sesame wherever the army uniform held guard.

I had not counted, however, upon the obstinate stupidity of the railroad special officers, who, in reality were patrolling the pipe Phone 470 line, and whose uniform Cousin Agatha had mistaken for that of the army. And my mistake made me the victim of an embarrassing and unpleasant episode. Getting away from the house was absurdly easy. I stole out of

The dog's pride, however, could not begin to equal that of his master. The gloomiest m'santhrope in the world would have been moved to laughter at the sight of poor old William's air of importance as he ushered me down the path to the wild grape arbor, from which his portable footbridge afforded us a dry crossing to the

"No.

That was very thoughtful, indeed. William," I whispered, reflecting grimly that some one was very apt to hear us if my poor old kept up his stage whispers much longer. "But we musty't talk any more, you know. The pipe line must be very near."

STOP THAT INSTANTLY."

"Jest a step furder, Mis" Gramie, an' I'll keep mum as an o'rter," he promised fervently, but his resolve came too late, for as we climbed the slope to the pipe line I heard a rather thin masculine voice with excitement in its tones say guardedly: "Look sharp, Bill," Bill evidently obeyed the command, for the next instant two men rushed down the incline just above us, and seized William and "By George, here's a woman. Bill," the first exclaimed, letting his electric flashlight travel over "I heard the gang they're afraid of had a woman in it, and I guess we've got her." "If you will look at this you will find you are mistaken," I said courteously, although I was trembling with resentful indignation at the rough handling of my calmors. I put my hand to my blouse in order to display my secret service bade, but the man named Bill, a burly individual, quickly struck down my hand, and then pinioned my arms,

"None of that, my lady," he said roughly. "We'll have no gun play this time, my dear."

WILLIAM WHISPERS.

William, who had submitted passively enough before, for he has great respect for constituted authority, gave a hoarse cry as he saw the man's rough handling of me, threv off his own captor easily, and lunging forward be-arms of the man named Bill. 'William!" I commanded sharply, for I knew that resistance was madners, "stop that instantly."

I was sorry I had spoken an instant later, for Bill's comrade. a tall, scrawny individual with r prominent Adam's apple, which the laundry door with William worked up and down obtrusively when he spoke, took advantage of William's instant obedience to give the old chap a cruel kick as
