The Hawaiian plantations are represented as being on a sound financial basis despite the present depression, but some of them, says the review, will show little, if any, profit next season.

The Hawaiian Trust company's report says that the Crockett refinery in California, approximately 90 per cent of the stock which is owned in Hawaii, has suffered a loss of several million dollars this season owing to inability to dispose of sugar at a price in keeping with the figures at which purchases were made. Consequently the review points out, while many of the Hawaiian planters seemingly have made large profits in 1920, their losses incident to the situation of Crockett refinery have reduced their income considerably.

The report adds:

"We understand that since July 14, 1920, the Hawaiian sugar plantations under the contracts have shipped to the Crockett refinery in the neighborhood of 120,000 tons of raw sugar. We understand also that the carryover on December 31, as now estimated, will be in the neighborhood of 80,000 tons."

HAWAIAN SUGAR CROP IS LARGE

Low Prices and Record Crops Are Prophecied For Coming Season

HONOLULU, T. H., Jan. 4.—There are prospects for an enormous sugar crop in Hawaii in 1921 with comparatively low prices prevailing, according to a review prepared by the Hawaiian Trust company and published by the Honolulu Star Bulletin. According to this source, Hawaiian planters will receive an average price of not more than 6 cents for next year's crop. On the other hand, says the review, there are indications for an increased consumption of sugar next year.
