ANSWER MAKES COUNTER CLAIM

Defendant Seeks to Recover in Suit Between Two Lumber Companies

An answer to the triple-cause complaint of the Silverton Lumber company against the Silver Falls Timber company was filed Tuesday in the circuit court. Apart from the interest aroused in the suit because of the large sum involved, which is nearly $104,000, considerable interest is manifested throughout the state because of certain legal phases of the case which in a measure might be influenced through war conditions existing during a part of the life of the logging contracts, through which the suit was brought. A counter claim is filed in the answer, the defendant asking that the plaintiff take nothing under the complaint, but that the defendant recover $112,233.92 together with costs and disbursements.

Delivery Causes Difference
In answer to the first cause for action, involving $101,576 the defendant denies that the differences related to the manner, times and quantities of the logs delivered, but rather regarding defendant's obligations regarding delivery.

The first contract was entered into between the two companies November 13, 1912 and later said to have been modified by a second contract on June 1, 1916.

In the answer the defendant affirms that the contract was entered into at a time when normal conditions prevailed, and the prices fixed with reference to these conditions. Big Loss Claimed. In fulfilling its contract with the Silverton Lumber company the defendant claims in the answer that a loss of more than $133,224.85 was sustained. The government established and exercised control and direction over the logging and milling operations of the company, it says, but in spite of these conditions the defendant claims the plaintiff insisted that the contract be followed to the letter, that an agreement could not be reached and from July 30, 1918, to December 1, 1919, the defendant claims a loss of $271,487.55 through the delivery of 38,361,264 feet of lumber. The answer denies the shipment of inferior logs and the loss of $30,000 to the plaintiff thereby.

Equipment Involved. In answer to the second cause for action, which has to do with a contract entered into between the companies in the renting and upkeep of a Shay engine, the defendant admits renting the engine at $10 a day and that it was used 75 days, but denies neglecting the engine or refusing to pay the rent, but declares it was refused when offered.

The third cause in the complaint refers to the use of a flat-car and the manner in which it was returned to the plaintiff, for which a judgment of $198.75 is demanded. It appears the car was partially destroyed by fire and for this the answer to the complaint, denies any responsibility, claiming it to have been delivered previous to the fire.
