secured from "The House Beautiful." Mrs. Monroe Gilbert, vice president of the league gave a talk with the pictures, calling attention to the good points in the rooms and designs shown.

Following this A. C. Barbour spoke of color combinations to be found in nature, showing at the same time beautiful examples of color photography.

The Arts league some time ago appointed a committee to revise the premium list for the art department at the state fair, and this matter was brought before the league for discussion, as the only business detail on the program.

This evening the interior decorating class and that of the study of American artists, under the direction of Miss Vivian Hargrove and Mrs. Monroe Gilbert, will meet in the library for their fortnightly session. These classes are open to anyone interested.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Blackburn of Corvallis, who have been the house guests of Mrs. Blackburn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Moffitt and other relatives have returned to their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Neal of La Grande, have returned from Albany, where they spent the weekend with relatives. They will remain for some time as the guests of Mrs. Neal's sister Mrs. Charles E. Knowland before returning to their home.

Cards have been received in Salem, announcing the birth of a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Cloyd Hatch (Regina Long) at their home in Portland.

The women of the Yew park circle of the Ladies Aid society of the First Methodist church will serve a luncheon at noon today to Bishop W. O. Shepard, of Portland, and the students of Kimball theological seminary, in the parlors of the First church. Bishop Shepard, with Dr. Youngson, arrived this morning and will spend the day in Salem.

Miss Maude McCoy will arrive home Friday night from Corvallis where she is attending O. A. C. and will remain over the weekend.

Miss Florence Elgin will go to Albany Friday, where in the evening she will be the pianist at the tenth wedding celebration of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. H. Van Housen. Miss Elgin will remain over until Sunday.

Mrs. Ray L. Farmer will entertain the members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the First Methodist church this afternoon, following a business session, the women to attend in a body the address of Bishop W. O. Shepard given at Kimball college.

Mrs. William McGeorge of Portland, formerly of Salem, is being welcomed by a large group of friends, having arrived the first of the week to be secretary to Senator Eddy of Roseburg during the legislative session. The McGeorges made their home here several years ago, during the time that Mr. McGeorge was connected with the state highway department.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Gilbert and the latter's mother will go down to Portland tomorrow to attend the automobile show, and will remain over the weekend.

J. D. Farrell, vice president of the Union Pacific railroad, came up the first of the week from Seattle, to attend the meeting of the state fair board. Mrs. Farrell and Miss Helen Farrell stopped off in Portland.

Members of the Woman's Relief corps and G. A. R. will hold a joint all-day meeting Saturday, in their hall in the McCormack building, a large dinner to feature the midday, formal installation ceremonies to follow, when the newly elected officers will be given jurisdiction.

Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Hadley of Albany, have returned to their home after visiting relatives here for several days.

Mrs. T. L. Van Orsdal is in Corvallis spending several weeks as the house guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gallagher, who are rejoicing over the arrival of a little daughter recently.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Blackburn of Corvallis, who have been the house guests of Mrs. Blackburn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Moffitt and other relatives have returned to their home.

THINGS THAT NEVER HAPPEN GIRLS AS BEAUTIFUL AS THOSE WE SEE PICTURED IN THE MAGAZINES

INTERNATIONAL CARTOON CO. N. Y.

What did she say? "What did she say?" Lillian stopped short as if her expetives had failed her. We were upstairs in her library, whether I had followed her after dutifully entertaining my brother-cousin until Katherine had come down to the living room.

"What did she say?" she demanded quickly. "I don't know," I confessed. "But something in his manner after you had made some fancy he had something up his sleeve that he wasn't quite so opposed to your idea of things as you think."

"Well, I'm sure I hope so, for Katherine's sake!" she said in the hopeless tone which invariably accompanied such a wish, and then for a long time there was silence between us. Ours is one of the rare friendships which doesn't require chatter to keep it alive and flourishing.

When the door opened after an hour, and Katherine came in involuntarily to each other after our first glance at her. Was this the way, listless girl who had gone down the stairs an hour before?

Her cheeks were flushed, her eyes starry, her steps light, almost dancing. She came up to us shyly, and held out a hand to each of us.

"Will it inconvenience you greatly, Lillian, if I should be married tomorrow?" she asked, blushing and looking at us like a schoolgirl, instead of a poised, trained nurse of several years' experience.

"Bless my soul!" said Lillian, and then sharply: "You don't mean you've given in to him about your work?" "Oh no!" Katherine replied, and the words had a stinging quality like a carol. "Everything has adjusted itself."

Lillian rose, took her by the shoulders and shook her playfully. "If you don't begin at the beginning and tell us every single thing, pronto," she said, "I'll—I'll forbid the bans."

"It's very simple," Katherine answered, but her tone said that it was the most wonderful thing in the world. "The physicians have finally announced Jack fit to go back into active service. And I fancy the joy the decision gave him opened his eyes a bit as to what I was feeling. Anyway, he came over today to tell me he was ready to withdraw all objections to my going on with my Red Cross work, and to ask me to marry him at once. And oh, girls, I am so happy!"

Her voice broke, and I saw the happy tears start into her eyes. I put out my arms and gave her into them. Lillian came over to us, impartially hugging us both.

A Perplexing Question. "You blessed child," she said, "Married tomorrow?" she said, where this child could see bustling in the next 12 hours. But, first, where's that young man of yours? I have a few words to say to him."

"Waiting in the living room for me to come back," Katherine joined, with a look of sudden alarm in her eyes. I could imagine the opinion Jack had just expressed of Lillian—knew that Katherine dreaded another meeting between them.

Lillian caught and interpreted the look. Her lips twitched humorously. "Don't worry, baby," she said. "We won't claw each other to pieces. I've got a little piece of humble pie to eat for my misjudging Jack, and as for his end of it, you mark my word he'll be eating out of my hand when you see us next."

She went swiftly out of the room, kissing her hand to us gayly at the door. Katherine and I looked at each other. "Jack's awfully angry at her,"

SLED TRIP ENDS IN FIST FIGHT

Dramatic Climax Reached in Balloonists Long Trek for Civilization

MATTICE, Ont., June 11.—The long trek to civilization of the three American naval balloonists came to a dramatic climax here today when Lieutenants Farrell and Hinton came to blows over statements alleged to have been made by the latter in a letter to his wife.

When they arrived at 2:20 today after a 15-day's journey from the Hudson Bay company post at Moose Factory, near where they descended December 14, the three aeronauts, bound in a tie of friendship through their facing together of death, apparently were inseparable.

An hour later, Lieutenant Farrell sat in the log cabin home of H. P. Williamson, clerk in the Hudson's Bay company store, telling of the party's adventures. He was shown copies of news dispatches, among them a letter alleged to have been sent by Hinton to his wife and published in New York which said:

"Mr. Farrell fell from exhaustion several times. Wanted us to cut his throat and take his body for food and asked us to go on and let him die, but we decided to stick and die together. I was the only one that did not express my feelings and kept them cheered up."

Hinton then came in. He told Farrell he should not continue his talk to newspapermen as he had dispatches from the secretary of the navy forbidding them to talk until an official report was filed.

"You rat, you have been talking yourself," Farrell snapped back. He then accused Hinton of writing false reports, referring to the letter.

Hinton replied that the letter had been published without his consent, but that its contents evidently had been exaggerated. Farrell then went into another room to apologize to Mrs. Williamson for his language. While he was gone, it is said, Hinton declared his remark about exaggeration was made only for Farrell's benefit.

Farrell returned. More words passed. Then Farrell took off his coat and struck Hinton on the jaw. Hinton was sent sprawling over a table. Newspapermen and others stepped between the men.

LANDIS BECOMES BALL DICTATOR

National Association of Minor Leagues Approve New Agreement

CHICAGO, Jan. 11.—Organized baseball today virtually was brought under control of Federal Judge Landis for at least seven years when the drafting committee of the National association of minor leagues voted approval of the new national agreement, which was accepted by the two major league committees. The action creates the office of a baseball commissioner with supreme power and with Judge Landis as the first incumbent.

All that remains is official approval of the league representatives as a whole, which probably will be given tomorrow.

The minors reported a few weeks ago to be hostile to the new agreement, today found the majors ready to concede their demands. Expressing themselves as satisfied with Judge Landis, the minors were doubtful as to whether a man agreeable to them would be chosen when his term expired, but this matter was quickly settled by the proposition from the majors that the minors sign the agreement for only seven years. Then, if a new commissioner is chosen, either a man which meets with the approval of the minors must be selected or they may withdraw.

The advisory board to settle baseball disputes will contain two minor league representatives, the other two to be the presidents of the National and American leagues. When this board is unable to settle a dispute, the case will go before Judge Landis and his decision will be final.

The minors today voted to restore the draft, but made reser-

Methodist Leaders to be Here Today

Bishop W. O. Shepard, resident bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church for the Portland area, is to visit Kimball School of Theology today, in company with Dr. W. W. Youngson of Portland, E. E. Gilbert of Salem, S. A. Dandorf of Klamath Falls, district superintendent of the Oregon conference. At 3 o'clock Bishop Shepard will deliver an address in the assembly hall of the school and at the conclusion of the address he will introduce the new president of Kimball school, Dr. E. C. Hickman. After this will be an informal social hour of students, faculty and guests. The public is cordially invited.

At the luncheon hour today Bishop Shepard will be the guest of the faculty and students of Kimball school at luncheon.

Although there was the largest pear crop in the United States last year ever known, members of the Oregon Growers Co-Operative Association received the highest prices on record west of the Cascades. This was due to skillful handling by the Association in holding pears in cold storage and awaiting favorable market conditions.
