

SOCIETY

By MOLLY BRUNK

THE Oregon women's legislative council is expected to send a representative to Salem during the coming week to lobby for bills pertaining to women and children. Portland women have been particularly active in the matter of legislative affairs, and already many prominent women representing various societies and organizations have appeared before the two bodies in the interest of various measures.

The Portland Woman's Research Club, one of the largest woman's organizations in the state, went on record this week as favoring the bill which calls for state aid for the Cedars, a detention home for Oregon women.

Mrs. Frank O. Northrup, a member of the club, was in Salem this week backing the effort.

The marriage restriction bill, sponsored by Dr. Owens Adair, has received the support of the Multnomah county W. C. T. U. The union also favors the law providing that women shall serve on juries where women and girls are being tried.

Among the bills that are creating a great deal of comment in woman's organizations is that of the teachers' tenure law. Mrs. George McMath has been in Salem trying legislation against the proposed amendment to this bill.

Another bill that is causing much discussion is that which recommends the combination of the child labor commission and the industrial welfare commission. The majority of the women of the state seem opposed to the combination which would in all probability throw Mrs. Millie R. Trumbull, for many years an ardent worker for child welfare, out of a state job.

Mrs. H. P. Heilman (Emma Hall), says Wednesday's Portland Journal, "daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Hall, left the city some days ago to join her husband in Virginia, where he is stationed as second officer on the U. S. merchantman W. A. Walona. Mr. Heilman, who is a Portland man, has just returned from Spain and with his ship will leave in a short time for Honolulu. Mrs. Heilman and her husband are visiting in Washington, D. C., and New York during his leave."

Mrs. Heilman is a former Salem girl, residing here with her parents, when her father was principal of the Lincoln school.

Mrs. R. L. White, Mrs. Horace Sykes, Miss Marie Briggs and Miss Leah Nichols went to Silverton yesterday where Mrs. White has weekly classes in dancing. An adult class of 68 having just been formed, of which Dr. Clarence Keene is president.

Preceding work last night the group from Salem were entertained at a dinner by Dr. and Mrs. Keene.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Gilbert left Wednesday for a two weeks' tour of the southern part of the state, which will include the principal points.

Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Downs spent the mid-week in Portland, stopping at the Seward.

Dr. and Mrs. John R. Sites motored to Portland Wednesday morning, returning in the evening.

Mrs. Z. J. Riggs motored to Portland during the mid-week, being accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Janet Waller, Mrs. Cauthorn and Miss Inez Flitts.

Mrs. W. T. Kirk was hostess to the Willits' class of the First Methodist Sunday school at her home on South Liberty street on Tuesday afternoon. After the usual business session a social hour was enjoyed at which time refreshments were served. About 25 were present.

The Past Matron's club of the Order of the Eastern Star will be entertained at the residence of Mrs. George H. Burnett this evening. Mrs. Burnett and Mrs. Marie Flint presiding as hostesses. This is the regular monthly assembly of the club.

Mrs. L. M. Parker returned to her home in Newberg during the week after visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. Ray Pemberton.

Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Patrick, who have been sojourning in Salem during the time that Mr. Patrick has been getting out the special Welcome edition of The Statesman, are leaving for Albany this morning, where they will make their home for the present.

Mrs. Fred Wright and son George left for Portland Wednesday night, on their way to their home in Scaview, Wash., after spending a week in Salem as the guests of Mrs. F. L. Purvine.

The Three Links club meets this afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Carl O. Engstrom, 575 North Capitol street.

Miss Florence Davis of Brownsville, who is here during the session of the legislature, will spend the week-end at her home.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Chapin was gladdened yesterday morning by the arrival of a son, who, as yet, has not been named.

Miss Nell Sykes gave an address before the Mountain View Parent-Teachers' association last night, using as her subject her post-war experiences in Siberia.

Miss Lucille Barton and Miss Lulu Rosamond Walton will go to Shaw tomorrow where in the evening they will give a joint entertainment of readings and vocal numbers. They will remain over the week-end as guests at the Dan Chamberlain home.

Miss Walton appeared with much success in a program Tuesday night before the faculty and students at the blind school.

Owing to several other meetings this week, the weekly card party of St. Monica's Altar society was held Thursday night instead of tonight, as the usual custom would schedule the affair. One other party will be held preceding Lent, this to be the final one until that period is past.

The Wednesday Night Dancing class of Mrs. R. L. White assembled during the mid-week, a complete program of club activities was held. Under their supervision a midnight supper was served, culminating the evening's festivities. The group included C. G. Nichols, chairman; A. E. Aufrance, E. A. Aufrance, F. L. Waters, O. L. Martin, Carey Martin and Fred Day.

Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd Mott, who are visiting here from Vancouver barracks, accompanied Mrs. W. S. Mott to Seio during the mid-week where they will remain until Monday as the guests of the latter's brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. S. C. Browne.

Dr. and Mrs. D. R. Ross and Miss Ruth Johns have returned home from Albany where they spent several days with the latter's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. C. Johns.

Other Salem folk going down to Portland to witness the performance of Pavlova and the Ballet Russe will be Mrs. K. H. Kitts and her daughters, Nina and Jean, who will be accompanied by Dorette Anderson. Nina Kitts has a wider-than-local recognition as a clever young dancer, having received her training under a graduate of the Denishawn school.

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith and daughters, Mildred and Roberta, arrived Tuesday and will remain for a few days longer as the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Vandervort. Their home is in Clatskanie, and they are on their way to California where they will spend several months.

Mrs. W. J. Busick returned home the first of the week where she spent several days with her sister, Mrs. R. L. Howe.

Miss Gertrude Purinton, the resigning head of the domestic science department of the high school, left Wednesday for Seattle to fill a similar position there.

observed in many girl pupils when undergoing a quizzing concerning some forbidden exploit. It at once interpreted it to mean that there were some things concerning Dicky which she wouldn't tell me.

When she answered me her voice held a calm dignity instead of the passionate protest of a moment before.

"I shall be very glad, Mrs. Graham, to answer any question I can—without betraying a confidence."

The inference that she held confidences of my husband's from which I was barred upset me and I said at a shrewd speech worthy of a shrew:

"It is no secret to me, Miss Fairfax," I said scathingly, "that my husband and you care for each other, and it is scarcely necessary for you to flaunt the fact that there are confidences between you and that you don't care to reveal to me."

"No Wonder Your Husband—"

I regretted the speech as soon as it had left my lips, but not so poignantly as I did a moment or two later when the girl had insulted her to her feet, and with the hot color of anger on her face, she flamed out at me royally:

"Oh! Oh!" she choked. "How can you say such cruel, unkind, unchristian things to me! No wonder your husband—"

She stopped, panic-stricken, and the color ebbed out of her face, leaving her deadly pale. I watched her with almost an unsteady fascination. What was the rest of the sentence which she had left unfinished concerning Dicky?

And then I saw a transformation indeed. As if by magic the shyness, the timidity, the girliness of Edith Fairfax seemed to melt away, leaving a calm, poised woman of the world, who looked out at me from searching, appraising, judging eyes.

"Please forgive me," she said with sincerity, but there was only dignity, no abasement in her confession. "I should not have spoken to you in that manner, but—"

"Neither should I have spoken as I did," I finished for her. "I trust you will accept my apologies."

She inclined her head in grave assent, but there was something in the expression of her eyes that disturbed me. I fancied I read renunciation, judgment, warning in their dark depths.

"I Love Him Truly."

"Mrs. Graham," she said after a little pause, "I want you to do me the honor of believing that what I am going to say to you is the exact truth."

She looked at me expectantly.

"I do believe it," I returned with unexpected earnestness, and knew that I meant the assertion.

"Then let me assure you now," she went on, "that your husband does not care for me at all in the way you think. That he believes me to be a true friend who has been able to serve him in two or three emergencies, who stands ready to serve him, I am sure. That I care for him deeply, hopelessly, you have guessed, but he does not dream of such a folly upon my part, thank God!

"It is my prayer that he will never know of my love for him, for my voice broke into tears all the more bitter because unshed. All I love him more truly than you can —would make him happier—be a better wife for him!"

I looked at her with eyes that seemed spiritually opened.

"I believe you would," I said sincerely, without rancor, giving her the tribute of honest speech which she had bestowed upon me. "And yet—I love him very much."

I couldn't keep my voice steady, and the next instant the woman opposite me had seized my unresisting hands.

"I was wild to say those last things," she said repentantly. "They aren't true. If you could only realize how madly your husband loves you, and how you wound him by your lack of faith in him! Do believe me. He has done you no wrong, even in thought. But he is in a position where he needs real friends for there are evil and adverse influences surrounding him. If I might venture to beg of you to withhold your harsh judgment for just a little while longer. And now, please, let me go. I cannot bear this longer. You can make any excuse you please to Lella and Mrs. Underwood."

Her face was working, her lips trembling as she dropped my hands and, snatching her hat and gloves, she pushed from the room and house.

And I, left alone, pondered two things:

She hadn't explained her journey to see Dicky, and—
Hers was the third request I had received to judge my husband less harshly.

Come And Be Pleasantly Entertained

Each and all to whom these presents shall come are cordially invited to be present at the armory on Sunday afternoon next at 3 o'clock and hear an address by Father O'Flynn of Portland, dealing with the true conditions prevailing in Ireland, as gleaned by a man who went to Ireland strongly prejudiced against the Sinn Fein, and who for nearly a year traveled all over that country and studied the situation in all its phases.

This is a world question. The relations of the Irish people and Great Britain are attracting the attention of civilized people in all lands. The reverend lecturer on this occasion has no mission except to tell the truth, and all mankind should be glad to hear that. He will tell it in an entertaining manner, without abuse or radical claims, asking only that the American public shall not be misled through prejudice or incorrect information.

The committee in charge is preparing a program of singing and music for the occasion and there will be neither admission fee or collection. All are invited. Remember, at the armory, Sunday, 3 p. m.—Adv.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results From an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that indigestion is caused by Hyper-acidity, meaning there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten soars in the stomach much like garbage sores in a can, forming acid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While rest follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salt is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

The Story of a Honeymoon

A Wonderful Romance of Married Life Wonderfully Told by ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 808

WHAT HAPPENED WHEN MADGE AND EDITH FACED EACH OTHER.

The first effect of Edith Fairfax's passionate adjuration and revelation upon me was a quick revulsion of the tender, pitying feeling I'd had for her.

So it was true, after all! Her journey had been to see Dicky—Dicky of whose very address I was uncertain! Jealous rage must have been visible upon my face, for I saw the girl shrinking back as if my hand had been raised for a blow.

The sight of her evident fear brought me to my senses with a rush. Even if what I feared were true something which my returning sanity and common sense doubted—I would gain nothing by frightening her.

So I schooled my voice and face to calmness, even to an aspect of friendly kindness.

"Don't let us misunderstand each other, Miss Fairfax," I said quietly. "You don't need to be afraid of me or to shrink from me. I am not angry at you"—I palliated the falsehood to my soul's angst and had indeed fled—"I am only anxious to find out from you certain things which it is necessary for many reasons for me to know."

There was a flashing change in her face—relief predominated, but there was also a quick, slight flaring of her eyes that I have
