CHAPTER 818

WHY ARE UNDERWOOD AND DR. PETTIT SO SUSPICIOUS OF EACH OTHER? "Did I understand you?" Lillian asked deferentially, "to say that Harry is in actual communication with you, that he has known all this time that you were here, next door to Madge, and that it was his assurance yesterday that it was safe to send for her, upon which you acted?" "I don't think I actually said so," my father smiled paternally sumber of city residences, well located upon her, "but it is true nevertheless. Does it surprise you?" "Much?" Lillian returned laconically. I read disapproval in her voice, knew that she shared

Dr. Pettit's misgivings as to the wisdom of placing too much confidence in Harry Underwood's honor, even though she hoped to clear him of the stigma of a trait My father caught the disapproving note. I saw his brows contract into a frown. "Have you ever lain chained hand and foot and body in a hot, loathesome, South South American dungeon?" he demanded, "tortured by hunger and thirst and vermin, and still more by the threats of your villainous jailers of the horrible tortures awaiting you when they should get ready to administer He didn't pause for an answer, rushed on dramatically. What Underwood Did.

"That was the experience I underwent after Grace Draper had joined the gang of conspirators whom it was my mission to foil And it was Harry Underwood, who, unknown to Grace Draper, engineered my release and guided me to a secret place of safety from which I was finally enabled to escape.

"By what means he accomplished this I do not know. I have never inquired, have been too cowardly to inquire. And if it were only my own life at stake instead of my country's work I should never have accepted his feet and 4 inches off the north aid. For I strongly suspect he nut himself in nawn with those deeded to Elizabeth Steiner by H. bloodthirsty ruffians down there. J. and Emily E. Smith by deed that besides bribing them he dated June 15, 1889, recorded in agreed to take my place when the man primarily responsible for my incarceration shall require a Said referees will sell at public scapegoat to save himself. That auction the above described prem- | was what Harry Underwood did "And since I have come back to this country he has consistently County and State of Oregon, all sided me. He it was who sugall plowed ready to sow, balance good the right, title and interest which gested this place, he who enginthe said Clara B. Hougham, Ida serad it as far as he could. J. ber was finally convinced I was dead, had so informed the rest of the conspirators, and that therefore, if I was careful not come to life there was no reason why I couldn't see you. He seemed to he most anxious that we should have the opportunity to see each other, and I for one am grateful to him."

"That's What Puzzles-"

ing. I hastened to placate him.-I, too, shall be always grateful to him," I said softiy. "But tell me, father, where did you meet Dr. Pettit? He went down there prepared to hunt for you until he found you." It was the most patent of ruses, but I wished my father to talk no more of Harry Underwood. The thought of what the man had risked, the fate which still hung over him on my account was overpowering. I wanted to dismiss the thought of him until I could be alone and weigh the matter fully.

decide what my duty toward him was. The ruse succeeded perfectly. "What's that?" my father asked. "Pettit? Oh, he didn't get down there until after the big show was staged. He did some pretty detective work, but to no avail until he ran into Underwood. Harry knew that I was in such shape as to need the services of a physician constantly-those devils down there came pretty near getting your old dad's measure, my dear-and he arranged with Pettit for him to come back with me." "I don't see why; if Dr. Pettit knew of Harry's kindness to you. he should be so doubtful of him," Lillian struck in. "That's what puzzles me also," my father returned. "There's had blood between the two men somewhere. When they're together they have the air of being ready to fly at each other's throats. I've thought sometimes it must be a personal grudge they ho'd, some quarrel over some woman, probably. Of course, if that's the trouble, neither could see the slightest honor or rectitude in the other." I felt rather than saw Lillian's glance at me, as quickly withdrawn as given. And I was furious at myself that I couldn'i control the blood which dyed my cheeks.

But fortunately my father was too absorbed in his own recital to notice my confusion. (To be continued)

WANTS TO HELP MOTHERS Mrs. Wm. Sager, 901 Nichol St., Utica, N. Y.: "I gladly write anything that helps a mother with her children. My little girl had whooping cough and I was afraid she would choke. I gave her Formal St. Sager Sage Mrs. Wm. Sager, 901 Nichol St., she would choke. I gave her Folley's Honey and Tar and it helped her wonderfully. She could sleep 'most all night without coughing." This good cough syrup checks colds, stops coughing, cuts phlegm and covers raw, inflamed membranes with a healing coating.

Sold everywhere.

A friend of President Wilson has sent him a bottle of some cure-all warranted to make him sound again. Why not try a bit of catnip?
