The Story of a Honeymoon A Wonderful Romance of Married

Life Wonderfully Told by ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 820 MEMORY MADGE'S HOW AMAZED HER FATHER AND WAS REWARDED WITH GREAT SECRET.

"Are you satisfied, Mrs. Underwood?" my father asked a trifle formally. "Perfectly." Lillian said, but here was an inscrutable something in her tone which set me quivering with excitement, the sense of something hidden, momentous, the knowledge of which she alone posessed. "There was no one in the hall, and I wish you would pardon my feminine fussiness. I will promise not to interrupt you this time." "Are you ready, Madge?"

father asked kindly, and this time, with my mind keyed to concert pitch. I recited the combination of figures I had mentally filched from Allen Drake the night I delivered to him the paper my father had sent him through me.

My father checked them carefully, and when he had finished he laid down his pencil and stared at me in undisguised astonishment. "Well, my little girl." he ejaculated at last, and there was both

NEW PERKINS HOTEL Washington and Fifth Sts.

pride and pleasure in his voice, DE 'this is a most wonderful feat, indeed. Now, tell me, can you confidently assert that you can carry this set of figures in your head without confusion and repeat it when ever you are called on, next week, next month, or next year, as the occasion may arise?"

This is Providential."

"If I repeat it once each day to myself I can," I returned quiet-

"Is that what you've been dong ever since Drake decoded this thing?" he asked quizzically.
"It is," I returned, unable to keep back an embarrassed flush. "I-I-thought the knowledge might be useful some day." I was conscious that I wasn't speaking all the truth. Nothing had ever so piqued me as Allen Drake's depreciation of feminine brains upon that memorable evening. I had memorized the fig-ures he had directed me to set down in order to put his theories to confusion. His frank praise of the feat had ticked my vanity inordinately, and I had resolved that if he ever needed the figures from me I should have them ready for him. "This is providential," my father said almost reverently. "Of less the person had a phenomenal memory like yours there would always be the possibility of a slip. And we don't want to trust another soul with this thing." He carefully tore out the pages of figures from His notebook and

"You're sure plow, you have it perfectly?" he said. "For here go the originals." "Absolutely sure." I returned. although I was quaking inside. He placed the papers in the empty fireplace, and held a lighted match to them until they blazed, watched them carefully until they were consumed stirred the ashes until be was sure ano fragment of writing remained.

"And now for the original paper," he said. "Madge, will you please unlock all those carefully locked boxes when you go home, get out the paper and bring it back to me? I will send for Drake, and the four of us will memorize the cipher in which it is couched, fortunately a brief one, for the rest of us haven't trick-and trained | memories like yours. Then if anything should happen to you-which God forbid, my dear-Drake could work it out again as he did before. And I can destroy the original, and be sure that the most momentous secret of the war is safe from thieves."

The Secret Revealed.

His manner was solemnly impressive. I was wild with curiosity to know what the cipher and president of the Teachers Federly meant. And I knew from the expression in Lillian's eyes that she shared my feeling, but was, of course, too proud and too discreet to hint at her desire.

I think my father recognized our feeling. At any rate he looked at us fixedly for a minute. then spoke hurriedly, lowering his voice even from the low, deep pitch it had sounded before. "I think you have both earned the right to know the secret of that paper. It is the formula, all but one small group of figures, of the most revolutionary war invention the world has ever known. It is our, all ours, the property of the good old United States. And, please God, it will be perfected soon, and then we shall see great triumphs for the cause of liberty. And the Germans would give even the kaiser and the clown prince

The chickens in the back yard at the White House are lying on their backs ready for their legs to be tied together. Moving day is just ahead.

Delegation Recommends Its thrown overboard. Passage After Stormy Session

AMENDMENT ATTACHED

Resolution to Defer Action is Reported Without Alteration

By a vote of 10 to 8 the Mult nomah delegation at a noon meet mend to the senate the passage of ON TUESDAY, NEXT, FEB. the Staples teacher tenure bill course we could train someone to with the Hindman amendment remember the figures but it would that it be referred to the people contents of THEtake a great deal of time, and un- of the Portland school district. By unanimous vote the delegation decided to report without recommendation the Hume resolution to defer action two years pending an investigation the result of which should be reported to the next legislature.

It was a stormy session of the delegation. Representative Gordon in despair said the delegation must admit that it was incompetent. Joseph said it was simply a deadlock. Kubli said the delegation members were men of intelligence, but simply couldn't settle the question.

The vote of the members present on the question of recommending passage of the Staples bill as amended was: For-Banks, Moser, Staples Farrell, Kubli, Gordon, North, Hindman, Leonard, McDonald. Against-Joseph, Hume, Gill.

Lynn, Wells, Lee, Korell, Richards. The meeting opened with a motion by Hume that the delegation report out both the bill and the resolution without recommendation. This failed to carry after Moser declared the senate did not want them reported without recommendation. This he declared would be only another attempt to beat the bill. Moser said that if the bill fails to pass senate or house he will favor the Hume resolution, although it will bring up the same fight at the next session.

from Mrs. Jennte Richardson, e figures I had memorized real- ated Council, who opposed the referendum, declaring it would interfere with school work. She said that if public sentiment wanted a vote the measure could be initiated. Hume charged that the adverse report on the bill had originally been signed by a majority of the senate delegation, but that two members had gone to the clerk's desk and scratched their names, thereby mutilating a public document. He argued against a referendum, declaring it would cause a bitter political campaign and cause great injury to the schools. He branded the Staples bill and its amendments as improper and said a properly drawn bill could be drawn for initiation if the people want to initiate. Kubli recalled that at a previous meeting it was voted to appoint a committee to draft amen.t-motion, but not with the understanding that a referendum amendment was to be attached.

The children are suffering, and the teachers, busy with their lobby, are doing no good in the schools. Their lobby is growing all the fime.

Banks drew matters to a head by urging that the delegation vote on the questions whether to submit the bill or the resolution to the senate. This was agreeable to Hume.

Gill served notice that he would withdraw his support from the bill if the referendum clause remained. Representative Lee urged that the whole matter be

WANTS TO HELP MOTHERS Mrs. Wm. Sager, 901 Nichol St., Utica, N. Y .: "I gladly write anything that helps a mother with her children. My little girl had whooping cough and I was afraid she would choke. I gave her Foley's Honey and Tar and it helped her wonderfully. She could sleep 'most all night without coughing." This good cough syrup checks colds, stops coughing, cuts phiegm and covers raw, inflamed mem-branes with a healing coating. Sold everywhere.
