BITS FOR BREAKFAST No sine die yet—Legislators still here—And they may get through today, and they may stay over till Tuesday.
That was no jitney meeting of the Ford people in Salem last night.
The great Ford organization is out after orders and a full production, and this means a lot to the business of the whole country, for they make about half of all the buzz wagons and tractors manufactured in the United States.
They are a tired bunch, up under the brown dome, and their nerves are worn to a frazzle, and so no doubt some things are being said that would better be left unsaid.
The drought was broken last night, and we are promised more rain, when our farmers need more fair weather. But a time will come, some day, when they will be crying for rain, strange as the prediction now sounds.
The Willamette Valley Prune association has been selling several cars of prunes in the English and other markets lately. The surplus will no doubt dwindle from now on till the next prune harvest.

Horseback Rider Is Injured by Automobile
M. Putnam, 2357 State street, was slightly injured and a horse which he was riding was hurt in a collision with an automobile driven by R. E. Bates of the Leonard hotel, yesterday. The accident occurred on State street near Twenty-second. Both men reported the collision to the police station but differed somewhat as to who was at fault in the matter. Mr. Putnam claimed that Mr. Bates was driving fast and Mr. Bates gave as his opinion that the horse which Mr. Putnam was riding had become frightened at another automobile and was unmanageable.
Many House Bills Are Signed by Governor
The following house bills have been signed by Governor Olcott:
234, Powell—Providing for the eradication and control of bovine tuberculosis and creating office of county meat and herd inspector in Polk county.

MEMBERS OF SENATE HURL ACCUSATIONS (Continued from page 1.) votes for reconsideration, but was unable to do so. Since then he has been a sore man. In the fight of yesterday it developed that Patterson's main delinquency relative to the reapportionment bill was in his neglect of Benton county, one of the counties he is supposed to represent in the senate. As the bill was drawn Benton county was linked up with Lane as the fourth senatorial district and the two counties were to be accorded one senator jointly. Lane to have one senator with Benton, but not so with Benton. This caused the people of Benton county to put on the war paint. They objected to becoming linked up with the state university county with their shafts were directed at Patterson and they sent telegrams to all members of the senate asking protection, declaring they had no one to help them. This threw a scare into the members of the special committee and led to a fight early yesterday afternoon about two hours before the main battle took place. The measure was slated to come up as a special order at 3 o'clock. Thomas, Lachmund and Eddy voiced their objections to the bill in unimpaired words. Dennis, a member of the reapportionment committee, then moved that it be re-referred to the committee for amendment and that the committee be allowed to retire to prepare the amendments. At this, Lachmund took the floor again, branding the tactics as unfair. "This measure," said Lachmund, "was deferred from yesterday because the gang didn't have enough votes to pass it. Now it is one of the henchmen of the gang who has made the motion to re-refer. The motion is not made in good faith." The motion to re-refer carried by a vote of 16 to 14. When the bill was taken up again with its amendments about two hours later it had been changed so that Lane and Linn counties were linked for a joint district. Polk and Benton were linked, Linn was accorded two instead of three representatives; Elk and Lincoln instead of Tillamook and Lincoln, were joined, and Tillamook was designated as the 29th district with one representative, but the Jackson-Josephine senatorial union was not changed. Hume moved to amend the report by striking out Josephine from the proposed district and leaving Jackson separate as at present. This was ridden down by a ruling of Banks that a report could not be amended, over a vehement protest by Eddy, who referred to Cushing's parliamentary rules, an authority used when rules in the house do not cover a point. Though Eddy proved his point, he was ridden down, Ritter citing a senate rule which he claimed covered the issue. Eddy shouted a protest that the rule read by Ritter did not refer to reports, but the opposition refused to recognize him. Eddy charged unfairness in attempting to vote without a pivotal member, absent. Eddy had previously made the motion that the bill be taken up for consideration, and Upton, following Eddy's charge of unfairness, accused him of being unfair in calling up the subject when he knew Smith was absent. Banks attempted to put a motion for adoption of the report. Thomas called the chair and was acknowledged reluctantly by Banks after he had shouted for recognition. He moved a call of the senate. When Smith could not be found Thomas read his ex-corporation of the Josephine county senator and asked that it go into the records. Pressed to the ropes Ritter offered the explanation that Smith had been given the benefit of his brother's home. He asserted that Smith's presence would make no difference in the vote. Thomas reiterated his statement that Smith was the pivotal member. Hume moved, so that Smith might be given the benefit of a doubt, that the question be deferred until 10 o'clock today. Ritter rejoined with the assertion that this was a parliamentary trick to beat the bill. This Hume denied, repeating that he wanted to give Smith an opportunity to be present. He declared the motion could not be held a trick to defeat the bill because no time had been set for the final adjournment and it was probable the legislature would be in session several days next week. He asserted that the committee's report was not a square deal. Lachmund, intensely angry, thundered the absurdity of any excuse granted Smith by the president. "If the president of this senate does not wish to be convicted of sharp practice," Lachmund declared, "this matter will be deferred until tomorrow. This president has been unfair and ungrateful. At the beginning of this session, when it was said his votes had been given the benefit of a doubt, he was accused heaped bouquets and floral wreaths about his chair and made him lily-white. What do we get in return for it? No representation on the committee

Standard Bushel Set at 58 Pounds The house yesterday afternoon passed senate bill No. 272 placing the standard bushel for grains at 58 pounds and providing a sliding differential between grades of grains on the percentage basis rather than on a named amount. The county assessor shall, upon sworn statement of any taxpayer, place on the tax roll any taxable property which has been secreted
