croon, Ireland on November 28 has just been obtained from the sole survivor of the ambush party. Lieutenant H. F. Forde. The lieutenant has recovered from his wounds in a London military hospital. All previous accounts of the affair have been based on deductions, in the absence of reports from eyewitnesses.

Lieutenant Forde suffered a bullet wound in the head and was clubbed with the butt of a rifle and left for dead.

He says that the two motor cars carrying the cadets were attacked as they were passing between rocky declivities on either side just as the leading car ran into a ditch which had been prepared for it. Many of those in the first car were wounded by the first fire from forces concealed behind huge rocks.

Those in the second car came up and fought until the last man fell wounded. Forde was lying wounded when he heard the order to cease fire. He adds: "Then a large number of attackers from both sides rushed into the road. They wore the uniform of British soldiers and handled us all very roughly, not excepting the dead. After knocking us about they called on us all to stand up."

"Two of the party were unable to get to their feet and were immediately shot down in close range by the 'shiners.' One of the cadets near me groaned and turned over. One of the civilians plunged a bayonet into his back. I muttered something and he turned to me and after cursing me, said it would be my turn next. I could see the others going through the clothing of the cadets who were being brutally treated. One of the civilians tried to pull a gold ring from my finger but failed. The next thing I remember was when one of them rolled me over roughly, to see I suppose, whether I was dead.

"When I woke up it was pitch dark. The ambushers retired to their positions and occasionally fired a few shots."

The average man thinks his health is mending as soon as his legs are strong enough to hold him.
