CHAPTER 11 WHAT MADGE DID TO WIN DICKY TO HER BAYVIEW

PLANS. "I say, Madge, what's the word as to the toggery for this stunt over at Bayview? We'll have to come home between affairs, won't we? I suppose it's moonlights for the dinher, but I can't talk to the kids." Dicky rushed into my room upon the day following our belated acceptance of the invitation to the Stockbridge home, an acceptance which appeared to delight my boyish principal exceedingly. Mr. Stockbridge had immediately named a day of the next week for the appearance of Dicky before the pupils, and I had conveyed the final arrangements to my husband upon his return from the studio. Why, I'm afraid there won't be time to come home between times," I answered, with an guileless a manner as I could manage, for I feared an outburst from Dicky at the words I preant next to say. "Mrs. Stockbridge expects us to come down to home after school and spend the time there until dinner, and I will of course have ample time to Notice is hereby given that the change from school costume to

She was by far the most attractive girl in the group of Bayview teachers, and I knew instinctively that she would have no qualms about "flirtin violently" anything attractively masculine in uniform or out of it.

"So far. so good," Dicky retorted. "But here's another thing. What are you going to wear? I haven't seen any new duds for you around the diggings
