Can't Say Too Much—Joel Hewitt, who lived in Salem many years, and has many friends in this city, is now a resident of Seattle, at 210 Thirty-second avenue north. In renewing his subscription to The Statesman, he writes: "Mr. Byron, the timber man, is on the streets of Seattle again. I see by the slogan issue of The Statesman that Salem is a great good center. You cannot say too much for good old Marion county, Salem, and their people. I am in the best of health, and wish all the Statesman force the same great blessing."

Body on Way Home—The body of Robert "Bob" O'Neill, who was killed in action overseas in the office of the state, and will be sent to Salem for burial. "Bob" was a Salem boy, a student of the Salem high school, and he was a brother of Dr. C. B. O'Neill. He was a member of company K, of Corvallis. Phil Ringle and "Vic" Smith and some other Salem boys were with him when he was fatally wounded at the front in France. No doubt a number of the Corvallis service men, his comrades, will attend the funeral in Salem, the date of which will be announced soon.

They took it, the old woman and all.

Crowd Is Demonstrative—Mr. McLean was on his feet instantly and asserted Mrs. Smith, who had been referred to as "the old woman," was the equal in his estimation, of the mother of any lawyer in the trial.

Hand clapping greeted his words and the court was thrown into a furor as the judge pounded his gavel and directed deputy sheriffs and bailiffs to clear the room.

Because of the outbreak, court was recessed for one hour and the spectators warned that the case would be tried without their presence should another demonstration occur.

Clara Hamon wept bitterly as she commented on the remark directed at Mrs. Smith.

"I don't care what they do with me, but they must let my poor old mother alone," she said.

Mrs. Walling and her 14-year-old daughter Phyllis, testified that on the morning after Hamon was shot Clara came to their home at Wilson, to bid them good-bye before she left on instructions of Hamon and his business manager, Frank L. Keitch, and that her throat, breast and hands bore bruises.

Mrs. Smith testified that when her daughter came to her four days later at El Paso on her flight in Chihuahua, Mexico, that the bruises still remained. Mrs. Smith testified Clara is 29 years old.

The state had sought to prove that Clara was a mature woman when she took up her association ten years ago with Hamon.

Do you suffer from HEADACHE?

Do you suffer from eye headache? This is one symptom of eye trouble that should not be overlooked. The brain in sensing the messages brought to it by the optic nerve becomes overworked when such picture-message is obscure and causes brain-fog and headaches that nothing will relieve except correct vision. Let our optometrist examine your eyes.

ed by his wife with a smile of welcome on her face, but this quickly disappeared at the sight of his face. After being assured that he was not sick she asked what the trouble was. He told her with face averted that he did not wish to see her alarm and dismay for something new was to arrive at their house in a short time. At last he turned to look at her and to his surprise she did not look down-hearted.

She conducted him to the house and taking the Oregon Statesman from the table she turned to the classified ads and there found an ad asking for a man to work in a store.

John rushed to the store and secured the position and that night he made a vow never to stop his subscription to the paper which had helped him out of an unpleasant situation.

and furnishing of this building or buildings will cost $50,000 under the legislative appropriation.

New Wing Much Needed

Plans for the new wing of the eastern Oregon state hospital at Pendleton which it is estimated will cost $2,000,000, will be prepared by Morris H. Whitehouse of Portland. It is said that this institution is badly crowded at the present time and that a sufficient number of patients will be available to fill all space provided by the new wing by the time it is completed and in readiness for occupancy.

Charles B. Martin of Portland was selected to prepare the plans for the new industrial building to be erected at the state school for the deaf. The structure will cost $15,000.

The board authorized the employment of J. H. Keller of Portland as engineer in charge of the installation of a new central heating plant at the Old Soldiers' Home at Roseburg. The plant will cost $2,000, and will heat all the buildings at that institution.

It also was the recommendation of the board that J. F. Meyers, superintendent of the school for the adult blind in Portland, should be called to Salem Monday for a conference with regard to the selection of a superintendent for the Oregon Employment institution for the blind authorized at the last session of the legislature. There was appropriated for the launching of this institution the sum of $15,000. The plant will be located in Portland.

Fire Escapes Ordered

For the better protection of state wards the board authorized the state fire marshal to erect new fire escapes on the several institutions as well as make other improvements along that line.

Other improvements for which plans already have been obtained include the erection of a barn to replace the one burned at the cottage farm and an enlarged refrigerating plant at the state hospital.

Appropriations for all of these improvements were made at the last session of the legislature.
