

EDGAR ALLAN POE, HIS WIFE AND THEIR COTTAGE

The Poe cottage in New York city, where the famous Edgar Allan Poe penned many of his famed verses and where his beautiful wife Virginia died amid poverty and wretchedness, is doomed, and will pass away. Unless $2,050 is raised the tiny wooden dwelling where he penned "Annabel Lee," "The Raven," "The Bells" and many more of his world famous verses will pass into oblivion.

BOOK REVIEW

"Americanization of Edward Bok," an autobiography. If you would reverse the title "Americanization of Edward Bok" and make it say "The Edward Bokizing of America" you would not miss very far in explaining the purport of this fascinating autobiography. It took 50 years to do it and 30 of these years were spent in editing the Ladies' Home Journal, but it paid.

Every one of the many millions of readers of the Ladies' Home Journal in the last 30 years will want to read this book, but it deserves a wider audience because of the very valuable hints on editing a great periodical and some suggestions you cannot afford to miss on the Americanization question.

ROCK AND RYE.

At a luncheon in Paris recently, at which most of the peace delegates were present, the conversation turned upon the fact of America having "gone dry." Whereupon an American delegate, name withheld, chipped in as follows: "You see," he said, "strong drink does not enter into our social life to the extent that it does in most other countries. A little while back, for instance, an American girl in London attended a reception where champagne cup was served. "She had never tasted wine before, and being quite ignorant as to its effects, and being also very thirsty, she drank deeply. Pretty soon the room began to revolve round her and she sat down. "A little later the baby of the hostess was brought in. The Am-

on a Sonora

Is Just as Beautiful as the Production Itself

The reproduction of the Sonora is so nearly perfect that it one would shut ones eyes they could not tell but what they were in the presence of the Easter Choir or the soloist, and the enjoyment would be just as great.

But don't stop at Easter, all year, year in and year out, the Sonora will supply you with that ever clear, true tone of our most talented artists.

We have many designs to choose from.

Draperies

Are Here In Abundance

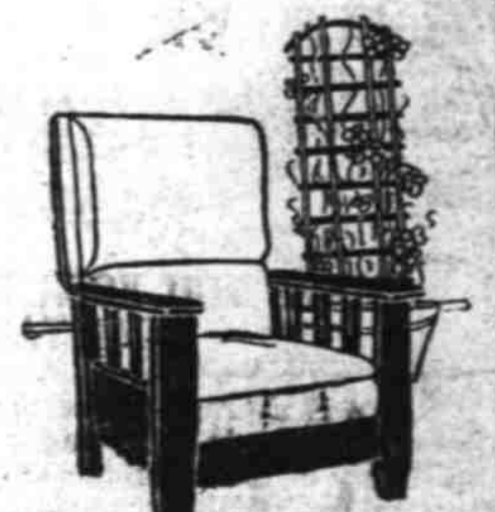

We have just received, and are arranging for your inspection, a large shipment of the very latest in Draperies.

The prices on the new stock this year are surprisingly low. Materials that sold at four dollars came in this spring for about half; others that sold for $2.50 are now $1.75, and proportionate prices throughout the stock.

There is no reason why your windows should not be dressed up for spring. Nothing could add more individuality to your home. See them in our south window.

Easy Chairs

at easy prices. They are displayed in our north window with the prices marked in plain figures. We could not get them all in the window so if there are none to your liking in sight, come in and ask to see the balance of the stock.
