

MY HEART AND MY HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase Of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

CHAPTER 21

WHAT ROBERT SAVARIN MANAGED TO TELL LILLIAN.

I went to Lillian's room by way of the kitchen. Betty had summoned me an hour earlier to the room where she ruled supreme. "How's Mrs. Lillian?" she had demanded. "Sleeping," I returned laconically. "Well, when she wakes, you come in here and get a cup of coffee for her. I'm making it fresh every 15 minutes, so it won't never be too old, and it won't waste a minute for you to take it to her. Mrs. Lillian kaint nebbah do nuffin' without her coffee now."

of Lillian's tastes had taught her, and handed it to me on a tiny tray. "Tain't no use carryin' up nuffin' else," she said, "she won't touch it, but you must get it down her."

"Is Robert?"

"Thank you, Betty. I'll see that she drinks it. I promised, and as I carried the steaming cup upstairs," I reflected upon the queer combinations of insolence and dog-like faithfulness that Betty was.

Lillian sat up with a start when I touched her upon the shoulder. "Oh, what is it?" she demanded a trifle wildly. "Is Robert?"

"Nothing has happened," I said quickly, answering the tortured query in her eyes. "But the nurse thinks Robert will rouse soon, so drink this coffee Betty sent up, and we'll go down to him immediately."

She reached for the cup with a hand that trembled. I held it to her lips, and she drained it quickly. Then I brought her shoes and a house gown, and after she had twisted up her heavy silver hair I slipped my arm through hers, walked beside her across the hall to the door of Robert Savarin's room. She was visibly trembling, pitifully unlike her usual self, and as Mrs. Cosgrove, who had been sitting outside her brother's door, rose to meet her I felt my friend's body quiver with nervousness as the elder woman put out her arms to her.

The nurse's eyes keenly appraised us all as she opened the door of the sick room and came out to us.

"Yes, Robert."

"Will you come in now, Mrs. Underwood?" she asked quietly. "I wish him to see a face he knows first. A stranger's might upset him."

Lillian gave Mrs. Cosgrove a slight push toward the door. "You ought to see him first," she said.

Robert Savarin's sister smiled a little sadly.

"Robert wouldn't think so," she answered. "Go to him, my dear."

Lillian waited no longer, but crossed to the bed and sank to her knees beside it. The nurse watched her keenly, turned to us.

"You may come in also," she said in a low voice, "if you make no sound and stand at the head of the bed so he won't see you at first. I may—need you."

I knew she was thinking of Lillian, and my own heart was filled with misgivings as Mrs. Cosgrove moved noiselessly to a position at the head of the bed. The nurse was carefully measuring by means of a medicine dropper a colorless liquid into a spoon, and I felt my own heart beat high with excitement as I realized that the awakening of Robert Savarin to life must be near.

I couldn't see his face distinctly, but I knew the instant that the heavy lashes lifted from his brown eyes—knew it by the light that flamed suddenly in Lillian's face. Then we heard his voice—only an echo of its former resonant beauty.

"Lillian!" he breathed.

"Yes, Robert," the simple words were a wealth of tenderness enveloping him.

The nurse stepped forward noiselessly, without a word put the spoon of colorless liquid in Lillian's hand, and withdrew again.

"Who—is—that?" the sick man asked weakly.

"Swallow this and I'll tell you," Lillian responded, putting the spoon to his lips, and he obeyed her. As he did so his eyelashes dropped over his eyes again, and Lillian glanced up at the nurse

Mrs. Harding Makes a Wish

Mrs. Warren G. Harding, at right, tells Beatrice Cline and Gertrude Nathan how much she regrets that there were no girl scouts when she was a child.

FIRST Lady of the Land, Mrs. Warren G. Harding, has assured a delegation of Girl Scouts that she wished herself fourteen years old and a member of their organization!

It was during Mrs. Harding's shopping visit to New York preceding the inaugural that she was notified by a delegation of two Girl Scouts that she had been chosen Honorary President of the organization. Although every minute of Mrs. Harding's time was crowded, she received the committee consisting of Beatrice Cline, fourteen years old, and Gertrude Nathan, fifteen, at the Ritz-Carlton, made them comfortable while they delivered the notification, posed with them for photographs and made them sit with her while they chatted pleasantly. The President's wife thrilled the girls with an invitation to the White House.

"I would be perfectly delighted if the Girl Scouts would come down to Washington during my sojourn at the White House," she said, accepting a bouquet, tendered on behalf of 35,312 Girl Scouts. Gertrude delivered the greetings of Mrs. Jane Deeter Rippin, National Director of the organization.

"I am sincerely and genuinely interested in the Girl Scout movement," said Mrs. Harding. "I think you all have a wonderful future in store. What I wish is: that I were your age and could start life over again as a Girl Scout."

Two very proud and happy girls took away this message of the new President's wife to the girls of America.

In sudden terror. But the other woman smiled at her reassuringly, and in another moment Robert Savarin spoke again with a voice perceptibly stronger.

"I—I—failed, dear. I wanted—to—bring—you—definite—news. But—when—I—reached—the—prison—camp—he—had—gone."

CONVICTED

Law founded on the Bible is good enough for Mayor Gilmore of Morgantown, W. Va.

A local man charged with not having the tail light burning on his automobile was arraigned before the mayor, who assessed a fine of $3.

The accused protested, said it was a poor law under which he was fined and that he did not think it would hold water in court.

The mayor declared that any law founded on the Bible was good enough for him. The defendant said he couldn't see where a tail light had anything to do with the Bible. The mayor looked at him pityingly and said:

"Do you remember the tale about the ten virgins, five of whom had lights and five of whom didn't? Well, if you do, you will remember that the Lord wouldn't have anything to do with the five without lights, and neither will this court."

LUMBER TRADE NOT JUBILANT

Prospect for Steady Demand Not Sufficient to Cause Optimism

The immediate effect of announced lowered freight rates was to stimulate lumber buying in territory where the west coast rates are to be most nearly restored in the old competitive relationships with southern pine.

Conservative lumber authorities, however, are of the opinion that the territory now buying in anticipation of lowered rates, will soon be stocked for spring requirements; and they are not overly optimistic concerning a steady demand until such time as competitive relationships shall have been completely restored by further rate reductions, which while not aiming to give west coast preferential rates, will afford the coast manufacturers equal opportunity with competing regions in the eastern markets of consequence.

For the week ending March 19, actual production at 24,638,490 feet was 42 per cent below normal.

New business totalled 52,329,629 feet, of which 12,377,041 feet was for delivery by water.

Shipments totalled 54,094,344 feet, of which 13,698,430 feet was represented in cargo shipments.

Orders for rail delivery totalled about 1,224 cars as against rail delivery shipments of 1,210 cars. In both respects the business for the week was approximately 1000 carads below normal.

The unshipped balance in the rail trade was 3,417 cars as against a normal of over 13,000 cars.

The unshipped balance in the domestic cargo trade was 61,554,221 feet; in the export trade 16,691,484 feet.

It Worked Wonderfully

Have you noticed the number of persons coughing this Spring, caused by an irritated condition in the chest, bronchial tubes or throat? This coughing is banished by a few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar. Mrs. Anna Stein, 410 Western Ave., Covington, Ky., writes: "Your cough medicine worked wonderfully on our little son. He is subject to bronchitis. The first dose helped him." Good for all sorts of coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough and grip coughs. Sold everywhere. (adv.)

Mistland Prune Cargo Is On Way to Holland

The steamer Kinderdijk of the Holland-America line, sailing from Portland to Holland and England, left Portland Friday with 2200 boxes of "Mistland" prunes, sold in the Rotterdam, Holland, market.

The shipment was made by the Oregon Growers Cooperative association. This is not the first shipment of "Mistland" prunes made by the association to Holland, as two other car lots were made last fall on the same steamer, by way of the Panama canal.

In addition to the water shipments to Rotterdam, the association had made its other shipments to Holland by rail to the Atlantic seaboard.

Board of Health May Supervise Laboratories

Dr. Frederick D. Stricker of Portland, secretary of the state board of health, has inquired of the attorney general whether the board of health has authority to supervise pathological and bacteriological laboratories in Oregon. The reply of the attorney general is that the board has such authority under the law if the laboratories are maintained for the preservation of the life and ited, according to an opinion of the attorney general in response to an inquiry by Frank C. Bramwell, superintendent of banks.

The question asked by Mr. Bramwell was whether the superintendent of banks, in taking possession of a bank, in addition to all expenses necessarily involved shall be entitled to a per diem fee.

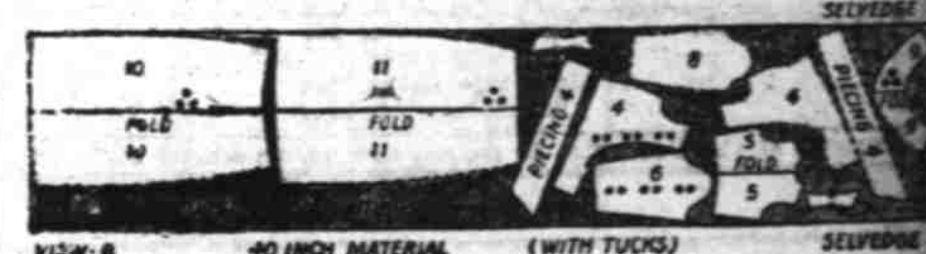

A classified ad pays big profits during the time he remains in possession and control of the bank for the purpose of liquidation after the expiration of a period of 60 days from the time he takes possession. The reply is in the negative.

True Economy

Could you do this?

We don't think so—without

The DELTOR

This is one reason why the addition of the Deltor subtracts the entire price from the Butterick Pattern.

Your layout is specially worked out for your size and for the width in which your material comes.

With the Deltor layouts you lay your pattern on your material as fast as you can pin it in place. Our highly trained experts spent hours on the task.

What is your time worth?

You pay your cleaning woman fifty cents an hour. Your time is worth more than that. More than the price of the pattern.

So the Butterick Pattern with the Deltor costs you less than nothing.
