ONE OF OUR GREATEST ASSETS

"The berry industry will become one of the Northwest's greatest assets. The acreage which has been planted the last few years, is enormous. Like some of our other developments, more attention has been given to the planting than to the marketing. What the berry industry needs at the present time is a strong organization of the growers. They should be formed into large groups. We need to develop more markets to obtain a wider distribution. We will need in the next few years, greatly increased facilities for the packing of the crop.

"Not only should growers cooperate among themselves but there should be a good spirit of cooperation shown towards the canneries and other concerns which must handle our products. By all pulling together, the industry can be developed beyond the fondest expectations of the most enthusiastic. It would be regrettable, if because of lack of good organization and cooperation and the proper development of the industry, that conditions came about where growers became discouraged and actually began to reduce the acreage, rather than maintain the present acreage. More and more the world is going to look to the Pacific Northwest for its supplies of berries and berry products. By all working together, we can give this country the same reputation for its berries that the Pacific coast has already earned for its other fruits."

The above is from the current issue of the Oregon Grower, the official paper of the Oregon Growers Cooperative Association.

Nothing should be left undone that can possibly be done to assure a stable market for the berries of the Northwest—

And this applies with especial force to the Salem district, which, with the right kind of cooperation, is found to become the principal small fruit district not only of the Pacific Northwest, but of the United States, and of the world.

This will require millions of dollars yet to be invested in packing and packing plants, and in cold storage facilities. From now on, it is a manufacturing and merchandising and shipping proposition—

For the fruit will be forthcoming when and as fast as the markets can be stabilized and guaranteed. It is up to the brains of the business, capable of assembling great sums of money, through cooperative and other kinds of leadership

A Wisconsin woman of 90 who has been a "campus coed" at five universities since she was 79, winning high marks has applied for admission to the summer school of the University of Wisconsin, desiring to brush up on her psychology and sociology. "Who ever becomes satiated on knowledge?" she asks, thus giving a useful hint on how to stay young in spirit.

What has become of our old friend, Col. Edward Mandell House? "Sic transit gloria mundi."

The German people ought to read of the stay of the children of Israel in the wilderness for 40 years. They are due for a similar experience.

To say that mothers no longer are heedful of the welfare of their daughters is not true. Their daughters today are safer than were the daughters of 50 years ago. To admit a general drift toward free love in this country is to stamp womanhood as a provocative instrument of evil. The originally believed. The investigation was made at the request of the Native Sons of the Golden West.

Plans are being made for the erection of a $100,000 memorial court on the highest ground of the campus of the University of Oregon, at Eugene, as a tribute to men of Oregon who lost their lives in the world war. The memorial court is planned to be at the entrance to an auditorium to be built later when funds become available. It will be flanked by buildings devoted to music and fine arts. In the court itself, which will be approximately 200 feet square, will be a memorial statue, two patriotically ornamented flag poles and tablets bearing the names of Oregon men who gave their lives. Completion of the memorial by 1925, the University's semi-centenary, is proposed.

LOOKS BRIGHT.

The financial credit of Mexico is improving rapidly under the administration of President Obregon. It is claimed, and with some authority, that Mexico is better able to meet her obligations than any of the war-torn countries of Europe. She has natural resources that baffle the imagination. Her silver and oil are boundless in measurement and her soils are wonderfully fertile.

Under a wide program of enterprise and development she might easily become the richest country in the world.

Education and industry are about all that Mexico needs to make her people a race to be envied of all men.

OVER THE BORDER.

Ontario has voted itself bono dry. The large cities like Toronto, Ottawa and Hamilton were wet by decisive margins, but the country districts overcame the town vote. The referendum was on the question of importing intoxicating liquors. This should make it easier to enforce prohibition in Detroit, Buffalo and other cities along the American border and also curb international bootlegging.

THE WOMAN OF IT.

A Chicago woman is going to France to see Marshal Foch and make protest against the retention of colored troops in Germany. If the women of America have opinions on any question they do not hesitate to take them to headquarters. The United States may not belong to the League of Nations, but that will not prevent the women of America from telling the nations of the earth where to get off.

A VERITABLE FLOOD OF GOLD COMING TO OUR COUNTRY

A veritable flood of gold is sweeping upon the shores of the United States. Already the precious metal in the country has attained the unprecedented amount of $3,991,487,915, and yet the tide is rising.

Financiers attribute this to the fact that the United States is the world's one "creditor nation" and for the equally important reason that the other nations of the world find it well nigh impossible to transact business with his country, by reason of their own depreciated currency.

The precious metal is coming from all quarters of the globe, but the European countries, more particularly Great Britain and France, as well as the Scandinavian nations, are paying heaviest toll.

Much of the gold received from England represents shipments from South Africa to London, while the French and other commitments hark back to the days of the war and in some instances to much longer periods.

For example, Sweden is sending gold received from Germany or war supplies; also bar gold of bullion which many believe to be of Russian origin. By way of the Pacific have come occasional shipments of gold from Siberia.

where they formed part of General Kojchak's war chest.

South America and Central America also are making involuntary contributions to this country's vast holdings of the yellow metal, mainly because unsettled economic conditions in Latin America virtually preclude any other form of payment to this country.

The New York local assay office, a new structure, whose modern equipment includes huge vaults five floors below the street level, now holds upward of $1,000,000,000, fully one-third of which has come from foreign countries.

The machinery of the assay office there is working at high pressure in an effort to reduce and refine the foreign bullion and coin. Reports that large quantities of the gold are being shipped to the Philadelphia mint lack official confirmation.

Commenting on this inflow, which some bankers have viewed with apprehension, George E. Roberts, a vice president of the National City bank and for years director of the United States mint, is quoted as saying:

"It is natural that the people of Europe should be sending us their gold. Everybody, everywhere, owes us money. The easiest way for them to pay, if they can, is in gold."

Pointing to the reduced international value of the British bank note, French and Belgian francs, the Italian lira and the shrinkage almost to the vanishing point of German marks and Austrian kroner, Mr. Roberts adds:

"So long as the premium on the gold dollar exists and is general, gold will probably continue to flow here in greater or less quantities. It seems incredible, however, that it can long continue at the present rate."

Paul M. Warburg, a recognized banking authority, now chairman of the newly organized International Acceptance bank, Inc., says of the gold movement:

"With gold flowing our way, having resulted in an unprecedented accumulation of gold in our country, and with the increasing strength of the federal reserve system, it would be plainly up to the United States not to hoard its vast banking strength, but to make it available for other countries for the purpose of once more starting the wheels of commerce going.

"America having become the gold pivot of the world, countries with strongly fluctuating exchanges, in order to do a world trade, would have to lean heavily on American short-term credits. American banks, in granting these credits, could well take upon their shoulders a burden amounting to a billion dollars or more, and to that extent, relieve Europe.

"This would be one of the many measures that the United States would have to take in order to bridge the gap now existing between the dollar and other currencies, but, on a very comprehensive scale, it could safely be undertaken only when political and economic peace would have been re-established in Europe."

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

Circus day tomorrow.

Pity the poor prune men.

They had a hard jolt last year, and it was hoped they might have a fat year in 1921. And still the shortage may not turn out as great as it looks now.

Get your horse seed.

Broccoli is the one money crop for our farmers; or at least one of the few crops in that class that is not hurt by excessive rains. The more rain the better. It grows great in the rain. All it needs is a living chance and a fair start in the summer and fall, and then it takes care of itself. If it will only rain hard and long.

Pretty tough on Germany. But think of the way it would have been had the shoe been on the other foot. There would have been no days of grace, and no pity on account of putting up a poor mouth.

The United States is getting so much gold that it is becoming embarrassing. The part of statesmanship is to use the gold to pinch the world leadership of this nation in all things worth while.

Now it is next week that the emergency tariff bill is to become a law. Procrastination is the first and middle name and handle of congress.

MY HEART AND MY HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase Of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

CHAPTER 56

WHAT KENNETH STOCKBRIDGE DID TO CONTROL HIS WIFE.

Milly Stockbridge's eyes were glittering with a light that betrayed the frailty of the throat upon which her sanity hung, while her slender figure was fairly shaking with the violence of the emotion consuming her. There was no mistaking the passion of jealousy that was swaying her. It was in every line of the malevolent face she turned toward our table.

"I mean you!" she called rancorously. "You over there with your baby face!"

Kenneth Stockbridge's sneaky hand darted out, seized his wife's arm in a grip that must have hurt her, at the same time saying something to her in a low, controlled voice. We couldn't catch the words, but there was something about the passionless, measured tones that made me shiver. It was as if I had seen the gentlest, kindest of house dogs suddenly turn with bared fangs upon a tormentor.

Her father bent forward, anxiously scanning his son-in-law's face. "I heard him say something, which the only word I could distinguish was 'check,' uttered with a questioning inflection, and I conjectured that the elder man wished to leave the cafe with his family at once."

But Kenneth Stockbridge shook his head, his eyes grim, compelling upon his wife's face. Another minute and she had lifted a cowed face to his, while her stiff, white lips muttered something that was evidently a promise to control herself. As she did so he released his grip upon her arm, and sank back into his former attitude of weary despondency.

"By Jove!" Dicky exclaimed under his breath. "That's the prettiest little exhibition of animal taming I ever saw. Bet a tiger he punishes the everlasting daylight out of her when he gets home. Any takers?" He glanced around our table with a merry smile, and I realized with a throb of relief that he had not grasped the real significance of Milly Stockbridge's outburst. "I didn't see how he could have helped doing so, for her eyes had been directly fixed upon me. In fact I had been compelled to exert all the self-control I possessed to keep from visibly quailing at the hatred in the glance my principal's wife had shot at me."

Bess Dean Explains.

"You are mistaken, Mr. Graham," Alice Holcombe spoke hurriedly. "Mr. Stockbridge is gentleness itself to his wife. It is only when she outrageously offends that he ever exerts his authority. You see I speak as one having knowledge," she added with a deprecating little smile, "for I have been a friend to both of them since childhood."

"They are lucky!" Dicky returned gallantly, but I noticed that his eyes had a speculative gleam as they rested on my friend and knew that his brain was busy with conjectures concerning her and her relation to the Stockbridges. The next moment he turned to Bess Dean.

"I infer that you are the cause of our fair neighbor's exhibition," he said, smiling, and a thrill of surprise ran through me. Dicky had seen nothing of the real situation, had jumped to the conclusion that Miss Dean was the object of Mrs. Stockbridge's jealousy.

"Why? I wondered. I had no opportunity just then to answer my own question, for Dicky was still speaking."

"Aren't you ashamed of yourself to cause such ructions?" he demanded.

I held my breath for Miss Dean's answer. It came promptly, as I might have expected, with laughing flippancy.

"My fatal beauty," she said.

lowering her eyelids for a moment. I strongly suspected that she knew how effective were her eyelashes—I really can't help it."

Madge Is Piqued.

Her answer, her ready acceptance of Dicky's theory gave her much food for thought during the rest of our stay at the cafe, which held no other incident out of the ordinary for Milly Stockbridge, who with her party, left shortly before we did, preserved the same frozen quietude into which her husband's words had plunged her. But I pondered deeply over Bess Dean, wondering whether she really believed herself to be the object of Milly Stockbridge's jealousy, or was trying to shield me from Dicky's suspicions.

And I think any woman will understand that I experienced a distinct feeling of pique that Dicky should have thought Bess Dean the only woman attractive enough to arouse Milly Stockbridge's jealousy.
