OUR CONSCIOUS LIFE

There is altogether too much ignorance and loose and illogical thinking in this day concerning what is harmless and what are sinful pleasures. Yet it is not difficult to draw the line between the pleasures that are harmless and those that are sinful.

It is also well to remember that the sins that destroy do not always express themselves in outward conduct. The most soul-destroying, cankering, searing, deadening of sins may never get beyond the thought, the contemplation of him who yields to it.

We are not mere animals. We are spirits, souls, created for eternity. We live not by meat and bread and drink. These things only minister to and build up our unconscious life.

Much the same elements built up the body, the unconscious life, of the primitive man as make up the physical body of the most educated and elevated man of today.

How much more alive than this primitive man is the man of today, who spends his whole thought, time and energy in gratifying his physical, carnal, animal appetite, propensities and desires.

"To be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace," says Saint Paul. The great Apostle does not mean that to be carnally minded will necessarily bring death, dissolution of the physical body.

The worst thing that a carnal mind or sinful life can bring to one is not the suffering that these bring to the body; medicine or other agencies may cure that; death of the body may bring relief. But the weakening of the mind, the blighting effect upon the soul, the shrivelling of the heart, the searing of the spirit—these are the things that come from the carnal mind, the sinful life that we should dread.

And how are we to get away from the carnal, the worldly, to sense life of mere existence and come in development where we may really live, where we may be conscious that we have a soul? There is but one way. We must get above the brutal, the carnal, the selfish, the worldly—first, in thought and desire, and finally in actual life and conduct.

We rise by the things that are under our feet, by what we have gathered of good and gain, by the pride deposed and the passions slain, and the vanquished ills that we hourly meet.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

Fair and fine. Mother's day.

Al G. Barnes has become one of the big men in the crowd. He has been playing to a great business, and has not this season had any rain.

A small boy in Salem home was up early yesterday morning and dressed in about a minute, against the half hour it usually takes. He dragged his mother to the circus grounds and walked her about 40 miles, seeing all the things that were to be seen.

Tom Walker, out in the Walker neighborhood near Middlegrove school house on the Silverton paved road, has a hen that is mothering three kittens. She has stolen the kittens from their mother and insists upon taking them under her wings; and she rights off the old cat when she attempts to assert her rightful claim to her own offspring.

Talking about poultry, there is new evidence coming up all the time of a growing interest in the poultry industry on a commercial scale in the Salem district. The Statesman will attempt to keep track of this movement from Sunday to Sunday, with a view to being helpful in the movement, which will mean a great deal for this district.

All the members of the Salem Broccoli association should get their seed at once of U. J. Lehman, secretary, 267 South church street. It is very important that every seed that can be had, of the "Valentine variety" should be planted—all that is on hand and that can be bought any where.

MOTHERS

(By Susan Hubbard Martin)

Deep in the hearts of those who bear burdens of sorrow and pain and care there blossoms a flower of memory rare. Planted there by—our mothers.

No matter whether we're young or old, whether we're poor or rich in gold, that love as a garment does not fade. Nobody's love, but—mother's.

Who has for us with the same deep care, who finds in our hearts these virtues rare. That others deem not as slumbering there. No one sees them, but mother.

Who binds up the hurt and the broken heart, many times pierced by the enemy's dart. Who gives us courage to do our part? Nobody does, but—mother.

Mothers of ours, let us love you well. Whose wrinkles and snowy hair do tell. The battles of life you've fought so well. Bravest of souls—our mothers.

For certain and sure there will come a day. When her Bible most gently be put away. And mother will go on a journey to stay. She must answer the call—most mother.

And when with the slowly ebbing tide. The beautiful gates of pearl swing wide. And we are called to the other side. Who waits for us there—but mother.

With arms outstretched and a smile on her face. Up there with mother we'll take our place. Redeemed by his love and boundless grace. Praising him still, for—mother.

PORTLAND FIRM BOOSTING PARK

Opportunity Offered to See Wonderland That Lured American Author

Glacier National park has come into its own as America's scenic wonderland, because this newest of the national playgrounds is the most ruggedly picturesque of all in America, containing 1500 sq. miles, with 85 towering peaks, ranging from 7,000 to 10,500 feet, harboring over 60 living glaciers and nesting 250 shimmering lakes.

Glacier park has entranced and enthralled all those fortunate enough to have visited there, and the word of mouth from these tourists has created a eagery of good-will which is bringing the results it has long merited.

Of the Glacier park beauty-land, Mary Roberts Rinehart says the following: "The call of the mountains is the real call. Throw off the impediments of civilization, go out into the west and ride the mountain trails. Throw out your chest and breathe. Look across the green valleys to the majestic peaks to where wild sheep stand impassive on the edge of space. Then the great mountain will get you, you will go back. The call is the real call. I have traveled a great part of Europe. The Alps have never held this lure for me. Perhaps it is because these mountains are my own, in my own country. Cities have called. I have heard them, but there is no voice in all the world so insistent to me as the wordless call of these mountains. I shall go back. Those who go once always hope to go back. The lure of the great free spaces is in their blood."

The opportunities to go and the accommodations offered Glacier park have never been so great as now. Co-operating with the park in efforts to allow more American citizens to see the unpar-

SAILORS STOP SHOW. LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 7.—Production of an alleged German-made film in a downtown theater was stopped by the management tonight after a crowd, including about a score of sailors, had attempted to force an entrance to the building, protesting against the performance. The sailors were stopped by a squad of police and a naval provost guard. —Use Statesman Classified Ads.
