IN A BENEFIT concert for the Near East and China famine relief fund the Salem Symphony orchestra will play at the armory on May 27. The entire orchestra, under the direction of Dr. John R. Sites, will take part in the concert.

Soloists for this concert are W. Miller Bevier, flute, and W. H. Mills, cornet. The program includes only well known numbers from the best operas and composers. All of the proceeds from the concert will go into the relief fund, the orchestra having offered their services through their director, free of charge.

The program as announced last night by Dr. Sites, is:
Overture to Marriage of Figaro
Mozart
Agnus Dei (Lamb of God) . . . Bizet
W. Miller Bevier, flute solo.
Adagio Pathetique . . . Godard
Minuet a L'Antique . . . Paderewski
Humoresque . . . Dvorak
Prelude to Siciliana . . . Cavalleria
Intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana" . . . Mascagni
Prize Song from the "Meistersinger" . . . Wagner
W. H. Mills, cornet solo.
Hungarian Dance No. 5 . . . Brahms
Triumphal Entry of the Borsari . . . Halvorsen
Waltz from "Faust" . . . Gounod
Arab Chorus from "Il Trovatore" . . . Verdi
March from "Tanhauser" . . . Wagner

Annual election of officers is the chief business to come before the Women's club at the regular meeting of the club tomorrow. Committees will also make their final report for the year's work.

Mrs. John J. Roberts will sing two numbers, "Thoughts Have Wings" by Liza Lehman and "Minor and Major" by Charles Gilbert Spross.

The missionary society of the First Congregational church will meet this afternoon in the parlors of the church. Mrs. Clifford Brown will lead the meeting having the chapters "Complex Community Situations" and "Community Leadership." Mrs. R. W. Simeral is the soloist for today. The hostesses are Mrs. D. J. Fry, Mrs. Raymond Walsh and Mrs. W. P. Lord.

Miss Constance Kantner returned yesterday from a visit in Seattle with her brother, Clifford Kantner and a sister, Mrs. Blanche Thomas, with whom she has been visiting since last Friday. Miss Le Verne Kantner, who went to Seattle at the same time, returned to Salem Tuesday.

A joint program and entertainment for the benefit of the library at the Highland school will be given tonight at the school house by the Mother's club and the Parent Teacher association. A program of interesting musical numbers will be one of the features of the evening's entertainment. Miss Joy Turner, a Salem music teacher, is in charge of the program.

For the pleasure of the children and any others who care to take part in it, a fishing pond has been arranged. Refreshments will be served. The public is invited.

Bills to come before the voters at the special election in June will be discussed at the meeting of the Salem W. C. T. U. next Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the association hall on South Commercial street. James Crawford will address the women and answer all questions which they ask on the proposed legislation. All women, whether members of the W. C. T. U. or not, are invited.

A number of former University of Oregon students and friends of Miss Ruth Westfall of Eugene who reside in Salem will be interested in the news of Miss Westfall's marriage to J. Louis Johnson. The young couple, both of whom are graduates of the university, will make their home near Mr. Johnson's fruit ranch near Eugene. The bride is a member of Alpha Phi sorority.

The regular monthly meeting of the Delta Alpha class of the First Methodist Sunday school was held at the home of the Misses Edna and Minnie Miller, May 10.

An interesting business session occupied the first hour of the evening, after which a social time was had. Several musical numbers were given by the Misses Charlotte Horning, Edna and Minnie Miller, which were thoroughly enjoyed by all, after which a dainty lunch was served.

Those enjoying the hospitality were Mrs. LeMoine E. Clark, teacher, Miss Edith E. Benedict, substitute teacher, and the Misses Mollie Hill, Bessie Smith, Phoebe McAdams, Gladys Childs, Ruth McAdams, Charlotte Horning, Josephine Shade, Lydia Hunt, Maud Savage, Mabel Savage, Minnie Miller and Edna Miller.

Napoleon Roque and Miss Maude Eskew of Salem were united in marriage at 8 o'clock yesterday morning at St. Joseph's rectory. Rev. Father Buck officiating. Only immediate relatives of the young couple were present. Miss Leota Wilson was bridesmaid and Clyde Gardner best man. The bride is the daughter of Marshall Eskew of Salem.

"You know Bobbins, the tenor, who used to sing to Miss Skezicks that every morn he would bring her violets?"
"Yes, did he?"
"That's what he did, and they got married; and now they're living in the country where every morning he has to bring her two buckets of water and help wipe the dishes!"—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.—Adv.

CHAPTER 62

DOES DICKY REALLY MEAN MORE THAN HIS WORDS SAY?

"Aren't there any decent cabarets in these parts?" Rita Brown put the question a bit querulously to Alfred Durkee, but her voice, one of unusual carrying power, reached every one of us.

"Local authorities aren't supposed to allow any other kind, Rita," Dicky drawled. "I'm afraid they'd be a little tame to you after New York, but perhaps if we hunted around a bit"—he pined hopefully.

"I saw Mother Graham stiffen and look sharply, disapprovingly at the girl. Dicky's mother detests slang and the easy familiarity of the studios. She had disapproved of Rita Brown from the moment she had seen her upon the day of the girl's arrival at the Durkee home four days before. I knew that her opinion hadn't changed, but on the contrary had been strengthened by Miss Brown's words and manner since that time.

Little Mrs. Durkee laughed mechanically, evidently determined to do her duty as hostess to her boy's friends. I echoed her laugh, because of the cowardly fear which every wife knows—that disapproving silence upon her part toward a woman whom her husband admires may be construed as jealousy—and the Fairfax girls also laughed—I suspected strongly—for a similar reason.

Alfred Durkee's laugh, on the contrary, was genuine and hearty. He was afraid to say in the state when any criticism upon Miss Brown's part, no matter how crude, seemed the cue for mirth.

"We have more cabaret, to the square mile than any other rural section in the county," he boasted extravagantly.

"Name some of 'em," Miss Brown commanded, doubt in her voice and face.

Alfred obediently ran over the list of the cafes in the neighboring villages along the automobile thoroughfares which stretch from New York City through Long Island.

"The Sand Pile," Rita Brown interrupted eagerly, repeating a name which I recognized as that of a cafe of which I had heard vaguely as a "rather rapid resort," to quote the language of the woman speaking of it, but which I had never seen. "That's the one I've been trying to think of ever since I've been here. They say it's awfully good fun. Is it very far from here, so far I mean that we couldn't go and get back the same night comfortably by motor?"

She was all animation and sparkle as she looked up into Alfred Durkee's face. Unless one looked carefully at the blue shadows under her eyes, the thinness of her hands and body, one would not have known that she had once just recovered from a most dangerous illness, was, in fact, far from strong.

"Why, surely, we could go easily enough!" Alfred Durkee returned slowly. "It's less than five miles from here. But—Rita, ought you to try such an expedition? You are surely not strong enough for anything exciting like that."

Dicky interrupts.
"Oh, piffle!" the girl rejoined rudely, although she took the edge off her discourtesy with a brilliant smile. "I'm getting stronger every minute, but I'm positively dying for a cabaret evening or something doing. Just think, it's been weeks since I've done anything save sit on a cushion and—"

"No, Rita," Dicky interrupted firmly. "Don't finish that. I'm sure you never sewed a fine seam or any other kind in your life. You're too lazy. Fed on strawberries, sugar and cream? Yes, that would fit you." "Alf—please murder him quietly so the neighbors won't know," Rita pleaded plaintively. "And then promise me you'll take me to the 'Sand Pile!'"
"We'll all go, of course, won't we?" Alfred Durkee looked appealingly at his mother. "You'll come along, won't you, mother? And you, Madge?"
"Not a step does me wife stir without me," declared Dicky stoutly. "The 'Sand Pile' may be all right for our exotic friend Miss Brown, but it ain't no place for a respectable young married woman unless her husband's along."
His dolefully determined face and voice were greeted with shouts of laughter. But I had a shrewd suspicion that underneath a mask of merriment my husband meant precisely what he had said.

NURSERY DRIVE PLAN IS READY

Initial Steps This Week-End And City is Divided Into Sections

Initial steps in the drive for the Albertina Kerr nursery will be taken this week-end, when plans to be carried out next week will be definitely formulated.

At this time the city will be divided into sections and women and girls assigned to each, who will start the campaign bright and early Monday morning.

It will be a dollar drive with everyone asked to give that amount for the little helpless babies out from Portland. Booths will be placed in the downtown banks and places of business, and the city will be well canvassed during the week so that everybody will be given an opportunity to aid in the charity.

Saturday, May 22, will be official tag day, with all expected to purchase a tag, whether they have subscribed their dollar or not.
