SOCIETY NEWS OF WEEK

GOLDEN JUBILEE

By Gertrude Robison Ross

O long the road to yesterday-So long the years that stretch between-Not even Love can bridge the way That leads to things that once have been! Not even Love can guide the feet Along the paths where youth delayed To fill its arms with blossoms sweet Or dream where vagrant breezes strayed.

Ah Love! White blossom time has fled, The golden summer too, is past; Where purple asters lift their heads We stand in Life's dim Fall, at last. A lad and lass upon the green-The high voice of a child at play-So long the years that reach between! So long the road to yesterday!

THE MAN WHO SAVES AVOIDS WORRY

NOTHING is more disturbing than wondering whether you can pay bills when they come in. So the wise man always keeps an emergency fund in the bank.

He can then give his best energies to his work, knowing that if a bill proves unexpectedly large, he has the money to meet it.
